Landon Asks Freight-Rate Cuts on Feed To Farmers

Pleads With Nine Roads for Joint Action to Aid in Drought.

Discusses Politics With State Chiefs

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 31.—A direct plea for railroads to establish joint emergency freight rates in Kansas drought areas to end "confusion and gross discrimination between farmers" was made today by Gov. Alf M. Landon.

The Republican Presidential nominee dispatched a telegram to nine carriers after a busy office day which included:

A discussion of national political and drought conditions with Gov. Walter Welford, Republican, of North Dakota, who predicted his State would go Republican in November.

Holds Press Conferences.

During the day, in the secretary of state's office across from Landon's, Frank J. Ryan refused to accept for filing a list of nine Presidential electors of the Union Party pledged to Representative William Lemke. Ryan held that the law required filing of electors before June 20.

Landon's drought telegram went to these roads: Texas & Pacific, Santa Fe, Frisco, Missouri, Kansas & Texas; Fort Worth & Denver City, Rock Island, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and Southern Pacific.

"Freight-rate reductions already made on cattle and feed on account of drought very much appreciated," he said, "but I earnestly renew requests made in numerous conferences here and at Chicago during past month and strongly emphasize again the position expressed in repeated wires and letters by Chairman Hoch of the State Corporation Commission.

Requests Joint Rates.

"Drought relief committees in all parts of the State report reduced rates announced are in many cases of little or no value because limitation to movement over one railroad. Emergency movements often require use of more than one railroad. Heretofore reduced rates applied joint line as well as single line in harmony with everyday traffic practice, and we can see no justification for present limitation.

"Such limitation produces rates confusion and gross discrimination between farmers and communities and wipes out much good feeling created by railroad announcement of reductions. Am advised some railroads have opposed from start this unreasonable limitation.

"In my judgment such roads show not only sympathetic understanding of critical situation but also far-sighted attitude in their own interest. Saving foundation herds means saving future shippers for railroads.

"There is also rugent need for reduced rates on grain and concentrates. Use of concentrates one of most practical means for preventing sacrifice and depletion of herds. Reduction in rates will be passed on to feeders by binding provisions in contracts for purchase. May I earnestly urge that immediate steps be taken to include grains and concentrates and to make all drought rates apply both single and joint line movement. Please advise by wire position of your railroad in this matter."

Landon's meeting with Welford and State Senator John K. Brostuen, of North Dakota, chairman of the State central committee, lasted half an hour. Brostuen told reporters President Roosevelt's recent "non-political" visit to North Dakota drought areas "could not offset" a "definite trend" to the Landon-Knox ticket.

G.O.P. Ready to Spend $1,000 For Answer to 'Why Roosevelt?'

Radio Commentator Hard Wants 'Best Ideas' New Dealers Are Contributing, and Even Picks Judge Favoring Administration.

If you don't believe this is a strictly non-political campaign, just consider the announcement broadcast last night by William Hard, under auspices of the Republican National Committee.

"Prizes totaling $1,000 will be given for the three best letters on 'Why I am for Roosevelt.'"

Hard and the Republican committee are perfectly serious about the thing. The Republican radio hour commentator wants to consider in his broadcasts the "best ideas" the New Dealers may be contributing to the country.

Besides, he feels the political habit of dodging argument of opponents "should yield in a democracy to full, frank, direct debate." Then, too, he wants to find out, after listening to Republican chims, whether anybody really is for Roosevelt.

This is about what Hard said.

What aids of the Democraic national committee said was a plenty. Frankly puzzled at first, they timidly asked whether they could compete. If they could not, they said they knew of a good many persons who would. In fact, they broadly hinted that Hard had better start hiring a staff at once, because he might get a lot of letters.

Then the Democrats really got into the spirit of the thing. They said they thought it was a swell idea. Some of them opined as how it might not be a bad stunt to stage a rival contest on "Why I am for Landon." This is a non-political campaign, you know, and the idea somehow is getting around.

But after all there have to be some rules, and Hard has decided that officers or employees of Democratic Party organizations, national, State or local, can't compete. That lets out the Democratic National Committee. But what about the writing Roosevelts? Hard's office here hadn't thought of that, but technically, they said, they didn't see why Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt shouldn't submit a piece if she felt inclined.

Later Mr. Hard advised The Post:

"Mrs. Roosevelt not only is eligible to enter the contest, but welcome. So are any other members of the Roosevelt family, not officers or employes of Democratic organizations."

Here are the rules, as announced by Hard:

"For the best letter, $500.

"For the second best letter, $300.

"For the third best letter, $200.

"All listeners may compete except those who are officers or employes of Democratic Party organizations, national, State or local.

"No letter may be more than 200 words long.

"All letters must be mailed by midnight September 10."

Hard had a little difficulty in picking a judge. He was afraid New Deal listeners might distrust a Republican judge—might imagine he wouldn't recognize good New Deal arguments when they saw them. So Hard decided to name "a university professor with a high reputation for scholarship and with a well-known sympathy for New Deal ideals."

Besides, this nonpolitical idea is contagious. Hard named Prof. Thomas Vernon Smith, of the University of Chicago, to judge the letters. Prof. Smith accepted.

The winning letters will be read on the air within a week or ten days of the deadline. Letters should be addressed to Prof. T. V. Smith, Room 841, Railway Exchange Building, Chicago.

La Follette Unit Cites Audit Aids For Contempt

Firm's Heads Charged With Failure to Appear at Senate Hearings.

In the first Senate contempt action ever instituted when Congress was not in session, the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee yesterday turned over to the District attorney's offices here citations against six officials of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co.

The certified charges, signed by Vice President John Nance Garner on the motion of the committee, were based on failure of officials of the private detective agency to appear at recent hearings of the committee, and alleged mutilation of subpenaed records.

The committee has asked that the charges be presented to the grand jury, but such action must await the return to Washington of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Officials of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., involved in the citation are W. W. Groves, president; L. W. Rice, vice president; R. S. Judge, W. B. Groves, J. E. Blair and J. C. Boyer. The maximum penalty for contempt of the Senate is one year in jail and $1,000 fine.

Charges relate to alleged activities of agents of the company in factories, in connection with labor troubles.

Action was taken under a new law enacted at the last session of Congress, which does not require the Senate as a body to act in contempt cases if one of its committees prefers charges.

At the last public hearing of the La Follette committee, officials of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. were suppensed to appear. Instead, their counsel went before the group with an order from the District Supreme Court to "show cause" why they should not comply with subpenas.

Ickes Arrives At Illinois City For Son's Rites

Summoned as Wilmarth, 37, Father of 3, Kills Self With Gun.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Tragedy struck on the last day of August for the second successive year into the family circle of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, its victim today being Wilmarth Ickes, 37, son of the Cabinet member.

The young man, an official of a printing company, married and the father of three children, was found shot to death by the caretaker at the parental home in suburban Winnetka, a .38 automatic pistol lying on his chest.

Just one year ago today, his mother, Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes, wife of the Secretary, was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Velarde, N. Mex. The son of Mrs. Ickes by a former marriage, Wilmarth had been legally adopted by Secretary Ickes.

Police Sergeant Harold Lewis, of Winnetka, who was called by Eric Magnuson, the caretaker, said the slain man "unquestionably had killed himself."

Capt. of Police Harry C. Enault said young Ickes had been under the care of a physician, Dr. Frank Blatchfor, because of ill health, particularly migraines (severe headaches).

As the bereaved Cabinet member flew toward Chicago, his Washington office issued a statement saying Wilmarth had notified his wife last week he had learned he was suffering from tuberculosis.

Secretary Ickes reached here by airplane shortly after 5:10 p. m. and

World Crisis, Crops Studied By Roosevelt

Considers Both Issues as Train Speeds to Utah Capital.

Talks With Nebraskans and Rides Over Arid Region in Auto.

By the United Press.

Aboard Roosevelt Special, Aug. 31.—President Roosevelt tonight moved westward into the mountain country of Wyoming and Utah after a day given over to consideration of two widely separated problems—drought and international affairs.

Headed for Salt Lake City, where tomorrow he will pause at the bier of George Dern, late Secretary of War, Mr. Roosevelt took advantage of operating stops along the route, particularly in Nebraska, to scan the farming situation and to continue his inspection of conditions brought about by excessive heat and lack of rain.

Despite a blistering sun that beat down upon him as he sat in an open car, the Chief Executive toured for miles over roads that swirled with brown, choking prairie dust in the vicinity of Sidney, Nebr., to talk with practical farmers and see for himself the progress of soil conservation.

On return to his train parked at the little railroad station he found time to confer with farmer members of the Nebraska State conservation commission that is co-operating with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Funeral Train Passes.

Thousands of nearby residents turned out to welcome the President at Sidney, but the reception was tempered by the fact that on a track a few feet away stood the train carrying the body of Secretary Dern to his final resting place. Mr. Roosevelt did not leave his private car until the funeral train moved out.

As Mr. Roosevelt drove away from the train he spoke briefly, asserting that "as you know I am here on a sad mission. I am on my way to attend the funeral of a very distinguished American, the Secretary of War, George Dern. You all remember that Secretary Dern was a native of Nebraska. Because of my mission I can not with propriety make a long speech to you.

"I am, however," he added, "taking this opportunity to look into the problems of Nebraska. I want particularly to learn at first hand what you have done in summer fallowing, for I understand that you have taken the lead in that particular field, and as the result you obtained at least 20 per cent crops.

Discusses Bombing Incident.

"Moreover, I want to see for myself the progress of the cattle purchasing program initiated by the Federal Government. Both these things tie in together and I hope there will be here the same co-operation I have found wherever I have gone on my travels."

Almost at the moment his train was transferred from the Chicago Northwestern tracks at Sidney to those of the Union Pacific, a telephone line was run into the President's car for him to talk with Washington on possible developments growing out of the bombing attempt against the U. S. S. Kane in Spanish waters.

Satisfied, he then motored to the prairies, where, at a weather beaten farmhouse, he found thetenant, O. D. Burris, occupant of a quarter section.

"Well, you are getting by all right, I take it?" the President asked.

"Yes, I'm getting by," was the reply.

"How's your water supply, do you have to go far for it?"

"I've got a good well. It is 102 feet.

"I see you have been fallowing land," Mr. Roosevelt remarked.

"Yes, sir; 106 acres."

"Do you garden?"

"I did, but hail wiped it out. We had a hail storm June 8 that ruined the garden and left the corn field over there so you couldn't see a single stalk."

"Are you going to get any use out of the corn?"

"Oh, I'll cut it up for fodder for the cattle."

Mr. Roosevelt then inquired concerning Burris' loan and was in-

Pension Whip By Veterans Is Threatened

Groups Seek Legislation by Congress to Gain Job Preference.

Major Organizations Are Split Over Wisdom of 'Coercion' Step.

By Robert C. Albright.

With the $2,000,000,000 soldiers' bonus already paid in bonds and cash, major veterans' organizations are divided over wisdom of using "general pensions for World War veterans" as a whip to force further liberalization of veterans' laws at the next Congress, it developed here yesterday.

Legislative representatives of at least one large service group said general pensions will be asked "if" Congress refuses to approve a legislative program granting veterans preferential employment and otherwise liberalizing present benefits.

Lone Opposition.

"I don't mean that as a threat," said Millard W. Rice, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. "We want to avoid general pensions if we can, and the V. F. W. is not now on record for them. But there are hundreds of thousands of veterans not gainfully employed, and unless something is done for them we may use general pensions as an argument."

Only one major veterans' organization has come out flatly against general pensions, which offers possibilities for a raid on the Treasury overshadowing many times the cost of the bonus. M. Froome Barbour, of Cincinnati, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, said yesterday his group unqualifiedly "will have no part in any movement at the coming session of Congress looking toward general pensions for World War men."

Officials high in the councils of the American Legion, which holds its national convention in Cleveland, September 21 to 24, do not think the time is propitious for including general pensions in their legislative program. But, they point out, that is for the convention to decide.

Program Outlined.

Expectations are that the legion legislative program will concentrate on a universal draft law and a stronger national defense.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, which took the initiative in the last bonus drive before the other organizations joined enthusiastically into the movement, will hold its national convention in Denver September 13 to 18.

Rice disclosed last night that the following preliminary recommendations have been drawn for the convention:

Adequate pensions for the widows of all deceased war veterans.

Liberalization of service-connection requirements, by taking into consideration the length, type and circumstances of veterans' military service, especially as to overseas service.

Uniform policy for determining the degree of disability of all disabled veterans. Liberalized provisions for all "undercompensated" disabled veterans.

More effective Federal, State, county and municipal veterans employment and civil service preference laws.

Rice said that although an existing executive order gives veterans civil service preference, his organization will seek more binding provision in the law. On whether or not this and other phases of their legislative program are accepted, he said, will hinge the V. F. W. attitude toward general or universal pensions for veterans.

Answers "Rumor."

The Disabled American Veterans said it was in answer to "rumors in Washington that the three organizations might pool their strength to urge a pension plan" that National Commander Barbour of the D. A. V. issued his statement in opposition to such a movement.

The recent Milwaukee convention of the Disabled American Veterans "bluntly refused" to consider any pension plan, Barbour said.

"So, regardless of what others may—or may not do—the D. A. V. will not participate in any pension campaign. There is still much to do for the man today handicapped from his war service and we intend to use our fullest influence for this group."

Barbour announced establishment of a "National Re-employment Service for Disabled Veterans." Forty employes of the organization will be asigned throughout the country to co-operate with public and private agencies to find jobs for qualified wartime disabled men.

Cold? Not at All; It's Just Not Hot

There is nothing abnormal about the current snappy weather, according to the Weather Bureau.

"It just seems abnormally cool now because it has been abnormally hot," a meteorologist explained. "This is normal weather for the beginning of September."

No change is anticipated today, the Weather Bureau said, which means that you had better keep the blankets on the bed again tonight. The high temperature yesterday was 77 at 2:45 p. m. and the low was 59 at 6 a. m.

U. S. Insists Spaniards Fix Air Attack Blame; Ship Resumes Course

Irun Garrison to Use Hostages As Targets for Rebel Bombers

Loyalists, Ready to 'Win or Die,' Send Families Into France.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 31.—The sorely-pressed government defenders of Irun tonight sent their families across the French frontier and swore they would expose 300 rebel prisoners as targets for rebel bombs.

The prisoners were trucked into the battered and besieged city from nearby Fort Guadalupe.

They will be placed in exposed areas of the city, the government leaders said, the minute the next rebel bomb whines toward the city.

While packing women, sweethearts, children and old men off toward the French frontier, the government defenders forced the families of all suspected of rebel sympathies to stay in the city to suffer the ravages of a renewed bombardment by the rebels.

As the battered city held only combatants and enemy hostages, the defenders prepared to win or die within their crumbling walls.

A combined land, sea and air attack would be launched any moment, the government leaders feared, in a final effort by the rebel high command to make good their threat to "reduce the city to ashes."

Fierce and colorful units of Asturian miners, fighting in the service of the government, spent the lull between bombardments by fashioning crude home-made bombs.

They wrapped chunks of dynamite in paper so that the grenade shaped up like a piece of soap. They filled bottles with gasoline and fuses. They have hurled these bombs with deadl yaccuracy.

Prelate Sounds Warning.

London, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury tonight warned that efforts to mediate Spain's civil war might lead only to dissension among European powers, and urged they stick together "for the peace of the whole world."

While 11 nations were reported banded together in an international committee to regulate a "hands-

The Situation Abroad.

The United States demanded the identity of the airplane which bombed the destroyer Kane off the coast of Spain.

Loyalist defenders of Irun swore they would expose 300 rebel prisoners as targets for rebel projectiles if bombardment of the city is renewed.

Growing criticism of President Azana of Spain from within his Socialist regime inspired predictions of a government crisis even if the rebellion is crushed.

The Archbishop of Canterbury warned against efforts to mediate the Spanish war and said "the world seems to be going mad."

The Spanish government claimed victory in a battle with rebels only 65 miles from Madrid.

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has asked the American Embassy at Madrid to obtain from the Spanish government an explicit statement as to whether the unidentified airplane that bombed the U. S. S. Kane was a government plane, the State Department said last night.

In a note to Eric G. Wendelin, in charge of the American Embassy, Hull recounted the circumstances of the attack, in which the plane loosed six bombs at the American cruiser; restated the American doctrine of noninterference, and added:

"Since the plane making the attack was unidentified, the President has directed that this incident be brought to the attention of the Spanish government through you, and informally, with no intention as to recognition, to the attention of Gen. Franco through the American consul at Seville, with the request that both sides issue instructions in the strongest terms, as the American Government feels confident they will desire to do, to prevent another incident of this character."

Ship Removal Sped.

Worried over the possibility that other, and perhaps more serious incidents of the same chacarter, may occur, the United States was speeding efforts to remove all American warships from Spanish waters.

The U. S. S. Oklahoma lifted anchor yesterday for Norfolk, the Navy Department said. Secretary Hull, at a special press conference, said, when asked when American vessels would be withdrawn:

"The chief portion of the 500 American nationals who remain in Spain continue there mainly on account of business or family connections.

"Both our official representatives in Spain and our American vessels have rendered splendid service in this work of evacuation. It is my judgment that within the next few days it will be possible to determine more definitely by what date this task of relief will to every practical extent be completed and the present systematic activities terminated."

Failed to Hit Plane.

The undamaged destroyer, the Kane, had fired nine rounds from its anti-aircraft gun, but failed to hit the low-winged, tri-motored monoplane in its three trips over the ship.

Speculation increased yesterday as to the identity of the plane. Observers here, with no clews available in the skeleton naval dispatches, were unable to guess the make of the plane.

Secretary Hull talked by telephone yesterday with President Roosevelt, who is in the heart of the drought area, while awaiting advices from both sides in the Spanish conflict.

As long as American warships are in Spanish waters they will fire in self-defense, naval officers said here. They added their emphasis, how-

Davey Refuses Plea to Return 'Straight' Felon

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 31.—Gov. Martin L. Davey late today refused to grant extradition of Carlton B. Chilton to Oklahoma to complete serving of a two-year reformatory sentence interrupted by his escape in 1914.

"I can see no possible good to society to send this man back," said Davey in ruling against an Oklahoma request that the Cleveland citizen be returned on the old bank burglary charge.

"This man is not a criminal by nature. His life proves it. The request for extradition is hereby denied."

Overjoyed, Chilton said with emotional fervor, "I am awfully glad Gov. Davey did not send me back. I hope now that Gov. Marland of Oklahoma will grant me a pardon."

Owen J. Watts, assistant attorney general of Oklahoma, said he was telephoning to Oklahoma City for further instructions.

The fugitive, now married and a respected citizen of Cleveland, who dabbed at his eyes throughout most of the arguments which preceded the Governor's decision, straightened and beamed at the decision. His voice, as he answered congratulations of neighbors who had come to the hearing, was so husky as to be almost unintelligible.

Loyalist Ranks Reported Split By Extremists

Growing Hostility Toward Azana Inspires Fears of Impending Crisis.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid (by Courier to Hendaye, France, Uncensored), Aug. 31.—Growing criticism of President Manuel Azana from within his Socialist regime inspired predictions today of an approaching government crisis, even if the Fascist rebellion is crushed.

Azana, his critics charge, failed to take decisive action either before or after the civil war broke out, and ignored warnings of his advisers.

Told repeatedly that Gen. Emilio Mola was conspiring against the Socialist administration, informed sources said, Azana replied:

"You are playing the same record over and over."

Four days before the rebellion, the President assertedly told those who cautioned him against Mola:

"To prove you are wrong I have a notion to appoint Mola chief of my military household."

Dissatisfaction of extreme Socialists, Communist and Anarchist supporters of the government appeared to be the nuleus of criticism.

Some already are charging Azana with malfeasance in office because of his asserted refusal to take preventive action of any kind when reports reached him a revolt was near. He elected rather to sit by and await developments, critics asserted.

Cracking Down on Dope

By Gerald Gross.

Al Capone sealed his fate by attempting to hold out on his income tax returns.

The most imaginative writer of lurid thrillers could hardly blend kidnaping, torture, dope peddling, forgery, undercover sleuthing and international intrigue so sensationally as did fate in the Mancuso-Rozen case.

It took meticulous co-operation between the Treasury's Bureau of Narcotics and the Justice Department's Bureau of Investigation, as well as the assistance of the French government to abolish Salvatore Mancuso's drug-smuggling activities, and obtain New York's first conviction under the Lindbergh kidnaping statue.

At this writing the 30-year-old tile setter, who bribed his way into the United States in 1920, has served 15 months of a 40-year term. Guilllaume Rozen, a Casper Milquetoast type who figures in this crime only because he happened to toss into the ocean a package he thought valueless, probably is still following his trade as a merchant seaman.

The bizzarre chains of events had their genesis in the arrest two summers ago of an obscure narcotics violator in San Francisco. Federal men, making a routine search of the prisoner's personal effects, found the name and address of a Brooklyn, N. Y., man. He was Giacinto Manna, 235 —— street.

Narcotics Agent Robert E. Primrose, of the New York district, was assigned to find out who Manna was and what was his business. The officer, in his confidential report, tells how he went about the task of investigating "Giacinto Manna," whose real name was Salvatore Mancuso.

First thing Primrose did was sit down and type Manna a letter, as follows:

"Dear friend: There is a friend of mine going to New York the

Post Newsboy, 45, Off to Get $50,000 Legacy So He Can Treat His Buddy to a $30,000 Tour

As soon as John Glenn, a 45-year-old newsboy, got through work last night he set out for Philadelphia, where he expects to collect a $50,000 legacy left him by an aunt in Atlantic City.

Glenn, who sells The Washington Post in front of the National Theater and the Department of Agriculture and who boasts he's "worked every corner in town," learned early yesterday of the fortune awaiting him. Within a couple of hours he'd planned what he will do with every cent of it.

"First," he said, "Irish, that's my pal, and me are going to Camden and get on an airplane. From Jersey we'll fly to Lansing, Mich.—I got a car out there—and then we'll drive to Detroit and buy a new car; maybe a Ford, maybe a Lincoln. I don't know yet which we'll get."

In the new automobile, Glenn and his newsboy buddy, Martin Joseph ("Irish") Bolster, will drive to Montreal "just to rest up for a month." Then again they may go to Tia Juana, Mexico. "It's nice there in September," Glenn explained.

"Yes," he continued, "I expect we'll go to Tia Juana. Irish has never been there. Now, me, I've been around. I've been everywhere. I go to show Irish the sights. He hasn't been anywhere much."

After the month's "rest" in Mexico—or perhaps in Montreal—Glenn and his pal will settle down to live on the income of whatever remains of the $50,000. Glenn thinks he'll have about $20,000 left after the flight to Lansing, trip to Detroit and rest in Montreal—or Mexico.

JOHN GLENN.

He's going to invest that $20,000, he said.

"I'll invest that money at 3 per cent and then I won't ever have to worry anymore," he declared. "Irish and me can live wherever we please."

When it was pointed out to him that the 3 per cent investment would bring him and Irish exactly $600 a year, he said grandly:

"Oh, well, we might work a little. Just a little here and there to keep our hand in."

Glenn believes he is the only living relative of the aunt who died, a Miss Nellie Ferry, of Atlantic City. He wasn't at all surprised to learn through a telephone call yesterday that she had left him $50,000.

"I thought she had about $50,000," he said. "When I get up to Philadelphia I'll find out all about it from this lawyer who has asked me to get in touch with him. But no matter how much I get, I'll share it with Irish 'cause he's my pal and I got to look after him. He's going to Philadelphia with me."

Knox Declares Labor Beguiled By Roosevelt

Government 'Friendliness' May Lead to 'Tyranny,' He Intimates.

By the Associated Press.

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 31.—Asserting the American laboring population had been "beguiled," Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, said today that in Europe an "apparent friendliness" on the part of government marked the start of "control" and "tyranny" over labor.

"Ask any worker in Europe today," the candidate advised in a campaign address prepared for delivery before a Republican rally here.

Speaking in an industrial and manufacturing center, Knox coupled labor with industry in charging that the Roosevelt Administration laid "the heavy hand of the Federal Government" on them both.

He also asserted that present-day unemployment was blamable not to the depression, but rather to the Administration's recovery program itself, calling the program a series of "reckless, helter-skelter, catch-as-catch-can experiments" which "slowed down natural recovery the way water in your gas will slow down your car."

Time for Change.

He told the Waterbury audience, assembled from a city where clock making is a major industry:

"If those clocks of yours had a political barometer attached, they would say that it is time to get a new Administration in Washington."

Knox made "these problems of depression and unemployment and poverty" his subject for the Waterbury appearance, which was the first evening address of his travels on his special campaign train.

While advancing the view that "it is not right" for Government to "direct employment and wages," he made an exception in the case of women workers and young workers, saying it was a proper function to protect them from exploitation.

"But the workers as a whole," he said, "must better conditions by their own efforts."

Labor Beguiled.

Knox continued:

"Our laboring population has been beguiled and lured by fervid protestations of friendship and promises of legislation. For three centuries American workers have fought their battles with economic problems without the help of the Federal Government.

"Wages are not set by law and cannot be set by law. They are set by the productivity of the land, the capital and the worker himself. When Government attempts to set wages it only disturbs industry and lowers total wages.

"Already the heavy hand of Federal Government has been laid on industry and labor by the present Administration. The experience of labor in other nations shows that control of labor by government begins with an apparent friendliness for labor and ends with tyranny over labor."

Police Charge Trio In Tomlinson Case

Three colored men, accused with John William Tomlinson, Washington attorney, in connection with a recent series of armed holdups, were formally charged with robbery at police headquarters yesterday.

Investigators said the charges were first presented to the grand jury and indictments were returned. The accused men, now in custody of United States marshals, were booked as Phillip John Pratt, 22, first block of I street northeast; Charles Henry Bass, 40, first block of I street northeast, and Walter Smallwood, 21, first block of I street northwest.

Pratt is charged on two counts—the first accusing him of participation in the Fairfax Farms Dairy pay roll robbery last March and the second in connection with the robbery and assault of Samuel Siratonis, proprietor of a tailor shop in the 3000 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

Each of the other men is accused only in the Siratonis robbery.

In signed statements, police said, the men named Tomlinson as the "master mind" of their holdup gang. Tomlinson is free on a $2,000 bond, charged in both robberies.

Roosevelt 'Friend' Is Sorry for Theft

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP).—Nine-year-old Jimmie Brady, who got a pair of shoes from President Roosevelt to replace the pair he wore out trying to get into the Democratic notification ceremony last June, was remorseful as he faced a charge of house-breaking today.

"I'm awfully sorry I did this," Jimmy told a reporter, "but I just wanted some ice cream. Gee, I hope the President forgives me, 'cause he's a good friend of mine.

An apartment and two fraternity houses were entered. Detectives said a group of boys took cigarette lighters and some empty beer bottles, which they traded in for cash.

House of detention attaches said the boys had a hearing today and the case was continued until September 18 for investigation. The boys were not held.

formed he owed the Government $1,500.

"Do you think you can pay anything on it this year?"

"I'll sure do what I can," the farmer observed.

On departure from Sidney the Presidential special proceeded by way of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Laramie. Late tonight it was scheduled to become the second section of the Dern funeral train into Salt Lake City.

Mr. Roosevelt, while at Sidney, was the guest of Representative Carpenter.

Gov. Cochran of Nebraska is ill and was unable to attend.

The President will remain all day tomorrow in Salt Lake, leaving at 6 p. m. (Mountain standard time) for Des Moines via Julesburg, Colo.

Politics and People

President's Drought Area Survey Must Be Looked Upon as Part of Campaign.

By Franklyn Waltman

RAPID CITY, S. Dak., Aug. 31. Although President Roosevelt stoutly has disavowed that his trip into the drought area has either political design or significance, it must be regarded as a part of his campaign for re-election and may justifiably be appraised on that basis.

WALTMAN.

The smartest campaigning is not always devoted to speech-making and conferences with political committees. Those are but the externals of political campaigning. Indeed, the smartest politics is that which on the surface does not have the appearance of politics—and President Roosevelt has become a master at that sort of game.

But the pretense that the present trip of the President is without political design is too thin to be credited. Actually the drought situation in nowise required a visit of the President. Moreover, it is doubtful whether he learned a great deal about this situation he did not previously know.

Concededly, Mr. Roosevelt's visit served two purposes which should have nothing to do with politics. One was that his presence in this area, accompanied by a score of correspondents, had the effect of concentrating national attention on the real problem of the great plains made visible by the drought. The second was that his pleas for co-operation may have the effect of making the people of the plains more responsive to the long-range rehabilitation program.

Perhaps the President had these objectives in mind when he planned this excursion into the drought area. But, it is hard to believe that Mr. Roosevelt also did not fully realize the opportunity this trip afforded him to appear before the drought belt as its savior and to give emphasis to the fact that the Federal Government now is, or in the next month or two will be, feeding a large number of its people.

Everywhere the President has stopped in the Dakotas he has pointed out that he is awake to the needs of those afflicted by nature and that he does not propose to forsake them. Thus, he appears as the good shepherd with a check book in his pocket, all the time emphasizing, without saying so, that he desires the credit for all this largesse.

With 53,000 out of 84,000 farm families of North Dakota on Federal relief rolls and with plans being laid to take care of 75 per cent of all farm families in that State this winter, it is no wonder that Mr. Roosevelt was loudly cheered wherever he stopped.

It means that at this time the Federal Government is pouring about $2,300,000 monthly into the State in direct relief payments and this sum by November 1 will be increased to about $2,700,000. This purchasing power has given new life to business in the small towns where the merchants assert the President is a "grand person" at the same time that they assert "business is pretty good—almost as good as last year."

On a smaller scale the same thing is happening in South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, the other three States in the northern tier of the drought area. And in each of these States there are Democratic leaders who confidently expect such disbursements to pay political dividends in November, whether the President does or not.

There is no doubt that the President has helped his prospects for re-election by this trip, especially in the two Dakotas. Not only has he driven home what his Administration is doing for the people in the way of relief, but he has paid the towns where he has stopped a high honor. In addition, he has made a pleasant impression by his gay manner and gracious speeches.

There seems to be little doubt that he has the edge in North Dakota. Even the Republicans there admit that. For practical purposes it may be put in the Roosevelt column. Most of the politicians doubt that Representative William Lemke will get a sizable vote for the Presidency in his home State—North Dakota—and they are agreed he will not carry it.

South Dakota, however, is a different story. The part of the State most seriously hit by the drought is west of the Missouri River. But the major part of the State's population is east of that river. Mr. Roosevelt's trip brought him down through the western end of the State. There he undoubtedly is popular and may make a good showing in November.

Persons from the eastern end of the State, however, warned observers on the President's train that he is not so strong in the eastern section of the State. Be this as it may, it would seem that Gov. Alf M. Landon has a fighting chance in this State.

Incndentally, the Democratic leaders in this part of South Dakota have concentrated on seeking to belittle Gov. Landon by painting him as a vague, colorless candidate, rather than citing the President's record. This type of campaign apparently has had the effect of demoralizing some of the Republicans, who privately confide that they wish the Kansan would adopt a more specific and aggressive course of action.

It must be remembered that South Dakota normally is a Republican State. Moreover there seems to be widespread opposition to Gov. Tom Berry, a Democrat, who is seeking to break precedent by being elected to a third term. The Republicans lay stress on the fact that the Democratic State ticket may be a burden to President Roosevelt. Yet some local observers believe that whatever the outcome President Roosevelt will run behind Gov. Berry in the balloting.

Persons on the President's train from Montana claimed a Roosevelt victory there. Divergent views, however, were expressed regarding Wyoming. Some thought the President would experience little difficulty there, although the same people thought Senator Robert D. Carey, a Republican, would be re-elected after a hard fight. He is a cattle man in a cattle State. But he has stiff opposition this year, with the Townsendites fighting him.

Rapid City, famed as the approach to the Black Hills and as the place where Calvin Coolidge in 1928 issued his "I do not choose to run" statement, now can claim fame as the scene of one of the most fantastic pieces of WPA boondoggling yet discovered. That Federal agency is spending $24,000 constructing replicas of the dinosaur along a ridge of hills outside the city. Even New Dealers snorted when they heard that. They blamed it on the local chamber of commerce's desire to attract tourists.

Vivienne Segal Ill.

Vote 'Coercion' In Mills Alleged; Inquiry Slated

Senate Unit to Investigate 'Intimidation' at Plants in Pennsylvania.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate campaign funds committee yesterday ordered an investigation of political activities in Pennsylvania steel mills after hearing charges that employes were being subjected to intimidation and coercion.

The charges were male by David L. Lawrence, secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and chairman of the Democratic State committee. Lawrence was an unexpected witness before the committee.

A "routine" committee meeting had been called by Senator Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, the chairman, and Lawrence appeared with Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, to present specific charges against two firms.

He offered documentary evidence he said supported charges of coercion and intimidation of employes by the Carnegie-Illinois and the Jones & Laughlin steel companies.

Hearings Planned.

After hearing the evidence Lonergan ordered Louis R. Glavis, committee investigator, and a staff of assistants to leave immediately for Allegheny and Beaver counties. He also announced that the committee may open hearings at Pittsburgh and other points "within a week or two."

Details of the charges were not made public. However, Lawrence charged intimidation of employes in connection with the Presidential campagn.

Talking with newsmen after the committee session, Lawrence said that President Roosevelt had carried Pennsylvania in 1932, but that the State was "stolen" by the Republicans. He said "scores" of ballot box stuffers had been arrested and convicted after the last election.

"We do not propose," Lawrence said, "to let this election be stolen either by coercion of employes of steel companies and others, or by election fraud."

Landon Kin in Firm.

Lawrence said he told the committee "it might be significant" that William T. Mossman, an uncle of Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, was connected with the Jones & Laughlin Co. at Harrisburg.

The witness mentioned specifically political activities at the Carnegie-Illinois plant at Clairton and the Jones & Laughlin plant at Aliquippa.

A committee official said that if evidence of coercion and intimidation of employes was developed in the investigation the matter might be referred to the Department of Justice for criminal action.

Officials said the resolution authorizing appointment of the committee, ordinarily a routine affair, was unusually broad this year, giving the committee extraordinary authority and power.

Three New Destroyers Soon Join Fleets of U. S.

Boston, Aug. 31 (AP).—Three new destroyers will join Uncle Sam's fighting fleets within a month, naval officials at Boston Navy Yard announced today. The U. S. S. Drayton, $3,500,000, 1,500-ton ship, will be commissioned at the yard tomorrow afternoon.

During the month the destroyer Leaders, Case and Conygham, each constructed at a cost of $5,000,000 in Boston Navy Yard, will be commissioned. Each has a displacement of 1,850 tons. The Drayton was built at the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—Alfred E. Smith is scheduled to make a public speech here next month—to a national gathering of Catholics—but he was silent on reports from Topeka today that he would make two or three addresses in opposition to President Roosevelt.

National headquarters of the Holy Name Society disclosed he is expected to make at least one speech at their convention the week-end of September 18-20.

Whether he will choose to talk on government—or on the Government—only he knows, they said, but they pointed out his interests in the Catholic group are concerned mainly with its corporation business and planning.

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Plans for a concentrated speaking program in Eastern States during the next two weeks were announced today at Democratic national headquarters, with emphasis on Maine.

The plans call for speeches at Buffalo, N. Y., by Gen. Hugh R. Johnson and Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama; a speech at Columbus, Ohio, by Senator Albert W. Barkley, of Kentucky, keynoter at the last two Democratic conventions, and speeches by four other prominent New Dealers in Maine.

Senator Black will speak at Buffalo Labor Day and Gen. Johnson will speak there September 12. Senator Barkley will address the Ohio Democratic State Convention at Columbus September 11 and will speak at Endicott City, Md., September 17.

John Cudahy, American Ambassador to Poland, left tonight for a swing through Maine to make two or three speeches a day until the primary on September 14.

Harry H. Woodring, former Governor of Kansas and acting Secretary of War, will speak at Woodland Park, Me., Labor Day and later at several other Maine cities.

Louis Johnson, former national commander of the American Legion and director of the veterans' division of the Democratic National Committee, is scheduled for one or more engagements in Maine.

Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania will go into Maine for a three-day tour at the end of the campaign.

Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, is scheduled for a Labor Day speech at Chanute, Kans.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, who resigned yesterday as Minister to Denmark, will leave tomorrow with her husband, Capt. Boerge Rohde, for a campaign tour through 13 States. She will speak at Binghamton, N. Y., tomorrow night.

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern Republican manager, said today the claim of James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, that President Roosevelt would win in 41 States next November, was "absurd."

"It's easy to claim States," said Martin, "but tto get them is a horse of another color. We're not worried about the East. We're as sure as anyone can be of all of New England, New York, New Jersey and Delaware. I don't think there is any doubt about these nine States being all set for Landon.

"The battle is a little hotter in Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, but our reports from these States are satisfactory now and these States will be in the Republican column in November. We also consider we have a fighting chance in Virginia, North Carolina and Florida."

Topeka, Kans., Aug 31 (AP).—The Union Party took court action today to compel insertion of nine Presidential electors pledged to Representative William Lemke, its nominee for the Presidency, on the Kansas general election ballot.

W. M. Murphy, Representative of the party's Chicago headquarters, filed application in the State Supreme Court for a write of mandamus to compel the Secretary of State's office to certify the electors to election officials.

This action was taken a few hours after Frank J. Ryan, secretary of state, refused to accept the election, chosen at an organization meeting of the new party here Saturday.

Ryan contended the time for filing Presidential electors closed June 20. Murphy and his counsel contended they had until September 20.

The court met September 15 for hearing the application.

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old age pension-recovery plan advocate, returned today from a nine-day speaking tour of the East and said he planned to leave tomorrow for two weeks' vacation in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

He was keeping his exact destination in the picturesque country a secret, Dr. Townsend said, because he wanted to get a "real rest."

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Aug. 31 (AP).—Joseph L. Dailey, assistant to Resettlement Administrator Rexford Tugwell, keynoting the New Mexico Democratic nominating convention today, charged the candidacy of Gov. Alf M. Landon was sponsored by the "most unholy crew that ever attempted to hide its greed and selfishness behind the royal robes of Americanism."

The former New Mexico district Judge called on the Republican Presidential nominee to explain what is "un-American" in the New Deal principles. He said the "ghost of Herbert Hoover still walks, clothed in the mantles of Alfred M. Landon and John D. M. Hamilton."

Characterizing Hamilton as a "self-styled hard-boiled politician," Dailey assailed the Republican national committee chairman.

"Beware," he said, "of a case-hardened politician from Kansas who comes into New Mexico and preys upon your fears while he works against your interests, heeding the master voice of William Randolph Hearst, holding Wall Street by one hand and waving the American flag in the other."

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Earl Browder, Communist Party candidate for President, held today that the Union Party was a creation of William Randolph Heartst, the address yesterday that "the funcpublisher.

Browder declared in a campaign tion of the Union Party is to try to guarantee the election" of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, and asserted the platform was "written by Hearst."

He added that the Union Party's campaign on behalf of its Presidential nominee, Representative William Lemke, North Dakota Republican, was "financed by the same people who have gathered around Landon and Knox," he described these "people" as "monopolistic" capitalists of the Liberty League and Wall Street, * * * the most reactionary forces of America, from both major parties."

'Shoot to Kill,' Posse Hunting 2 Slayers Told

Heavy Brush in California Combed for Brothers Who Killed Three.

By the Associated Press.

Yreka, Calif., Aug. 31.—Expecting a gun battle—and ready for it—possemen poked rifles through heavy brush along the wild California-Oregon border tonight hunting two former convict brothers, accused triple-killers.

Divided into small groups and aided by bloodhounds and Karook Indians, the posse slashed their way through brush 30 feet high as they trailed John H. Brite, 36, and Coke T. Brite, 34.

A belief that the brothers were fleeing in terror from enraged citizens in the posse was substantiated by their father, 65-year-old A. J. Brite, who said he had advised them to "go out in the woods until this thing died down and then give themselves up."

One posse trail led toward southern Oregon after bloodhounds picked up a scent at a miner's cabin which was burglarized Sunday.

Sheriff Syd. I. Brown, of Jackson County, Oreg., told possemen to "take no chances and shoot to kill."

Shot-torn and beaten, the bodies of Deputy Sheriff Martin Lange, 48; Constable Joseph Clark, 65, and Capt. Fred Seaborn, 50, of Vallejo, former Navy officer, lay in a morgue here, victims of a mountain gun battle early Sunday morning.

The slayings occurred when the two officers, Seaborn, and his vacation companion, Charles Baker, went to serve assault warrants on the Brite brothers. Seaborn and Baker complained they had been attacked by the men when a horse wandered onto their gold prospecting claim.

Yreka, scene of a lynching last year which Deputy Lange tried to prevent, buzzed with excitement but District Attorney James Davis said violence would not be permitted.

Grand Cruise Just 'Nauseau,' Five Sue

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Five school teachers, who assert their dreams of a "grand Pacific cruise"—as advertised—were shattered, started a $126,500 damage suit today against seven steamship and tourist corporations.

Four were members of a party that returned to New York Saturday after a 60-day voyage to Cuba, Mexico, the West Coast, Alaska and Hawaii on the Canadian national steamship Prince David. Marcel Zinman, of Philadelphia, the fifth complainant, had enough when he reached Vancouver, B. C., July 24, and returned home by train.

All said that during the trip they were "nauseated and suffered great distress and anguish."

The complaint asserts that the food, quarters and prospective delights of the long cruise were not all that was promised.

Leipzig's Fair Reflects Reich's Trade Efforts

Leipzig, Germany, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Third Reich's redoubled efforts to put Germany's foreign trade back on its feet were reflected in the annual Leipzig autumn fair, in full swing today.

At Leipzig are first shown the latest achievements of German scientists in the way of "ersatz," or substitute materials for those that cannot be imported now in view of foreign exchange considerations. Among these are various synthetic resin materials, and the recently invented rubber substitute "buna." A new artificial marble is shown, in which the veining effect is produced by photo-mechanical means on glass.

'Real' King of England In Court in Notes' Sale

London, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Anthony Hall, who claims that he is lawful King of England and that Edward VIII is not of royal blood, appeared in Marlborough Street Police Court today, charged with selling "1-pound notes" for a few pence and using Hyde Park for advertising purposes.

The complaining constable said Hall promised to redeem his "pound notes" at their face value when he became king. The magistrate let Hall off with a reprimand.

U. S. Inspector Killed Testing Plane for Races

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 31 (AP).—Cecil De Lasaux, of Chicago, an inspector for the U. S. Commerce Department, was killed tonight in the crash of an airplane he was testing for the national air races at Los Angeles.

The ship apparently stalled 1,000 feet up, Joliet Airport officials said, then to 500 feet and then fell 3 miles south of the airport.

De Lasaux had built the ship himself.

Machine Trade Begins to Show Sharp Pick-Up

But Volume Remains Far Below Pre-Depression Levels.

New York, Aug. 31.—"Among the most important industries in this country, is the machinery industry, which was exceeded in the annual value of its products in 1933 by only three other industries," says the Index of the New York Trust Co. today. "Its posion is a natural concomitant of the industrial expansion which has marked national development for the past century. With products valued at more than $2,000,000,000, it accounted, in 1933, for 6.6 per cent of all products manufactured by American industry, while wage earners, totaling some 500,000, represented 8.9 per cent of all those in manufacturing industries.

"Even these high figures constitute a drastic decline from the pre-depression era. A key industry in the production of durable goods, industrial machinery felt the full effects of the general program of postponed purchases which manufacturers throughout the country were forced to adopt in response to the declining demand for their own products, the evaporation of capital markets and the lack of confidence deriving from the combined force of economic conditions and Government policies.

Recent Big Gains.

"In recent months, however, there has been a marked improvement in the demand for industrial machinery and available indices both of production and employment for the machinery group, as a whole, indicate that the long-postponed recovery in this department of durable goods manufacture is actually materializing. New orders for foundry equipment attained an average index (1922-24 equals 100) of over 103 for 1935, five times the volume of 1932 and an increase of about 70 per cent over 1934; those for machine tools (1926 equals 100) averaged 86.4, or more than four times the average three years earlier and an increase of approximately 87 per cent over 1934. The employment index (1923-25 equals 100) of all machinery industries, between 1932 and 1935, rose from an average of 56.3 to an average of 82.1.

"Moreover, these gains have continued during the current year and the high percentage of obsolescence still prevailing in factory equipment, emphasized by the increased operating efficiency of newer designs, would appear to assure an even higher rate of production if the present general recovery movement is not infilterrupted."

Conference to Plan Traffic Law Unity

By the Associated Press.

The Accident Prevention Conference announced yesterday it will meet here October 1 and 2 to draft a uniform program of traffic regulation for submission to coming sessions of State Legislatures.

The conference was formed recently by Secretary Roper, at the suggestion of President Roosevelt.

The conference said Roper had suggested discontinuance of activities of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, sponsored by the Commerce Department. That conference's work was similary to that now being undertaken by the Accident Prevention Conference, and several of its executive committeemen have become members of the latter group.

Representative O'Neal (Democrat), Kentucky, is chairman of the uniform traffic regulations sub-committee of the Accident Prevention Conference.

Sages Gathered at Harvard Ponder All Sorts of Questions

2,500 Wise Men Hear Share-the-Wealth Problem Is Unsolvable; Will Weigh Human Behavior Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 31.—Twenty-five hundred scientists and scholars, gathered together here in a congress of wise men unique in history, tonight pondered on subjects ranging from "Why We Behave as We Do," to a share-the-wealth question which requires invention of a new firm of mathematics before it can be answered.

The discussion, which will end September 12, is a prelude to a formal celebration of Harvard University's 300th birthday, September 16 to 18, when Harvard will bestow honorary degrees upon a group of 61, among them ten Nobel prize winners.

Problems of high mathematics over which philosophers and scholars have puzzled for centuries occupied the conference today. Discussion of that subject and astronomy will continue through the week. Next week conferences will deal principally with man's inner make-up and external things which affect individual character.

The new mathematical share-the-wealth problem, declared to be mathematically insolvable until new mathematical methods are invneted, was presented by Dr. Ronald Aylmer Fisher, England's famous food supply mathematician.

The problem—"the agricultural land of a predynastic Egyptian village is of unequal fertility. Given the height to which the Nile will rise, the fertility of every portion of it is known with exactitude, but the height of the flood affects different parts of the territory unequally. It is required to divide the area between the several housgholds of the village so that the yields of the lots assigned to each shall be in predetermined proportions, whatever may be the height to which the river rises."

There are three variables in this problem, land fertility, height of the Nile flood, and its differing effects on each property.

This problem, said Dr. E. B. Wilson, Harvard mathematician, is similar to some outstanding economic problems with which the world is wrestling today. The fact that it has no mathematical solution would not cause mathematicians to give up, but to approach it in some indirect fashion.

Dr. Fisher said it is mathematically insolvable at present, but he said that it may be possible to solve and that this "presents a challenge to our mathematical institution."

The solution of this kind of a problem, he added, is the next step ahead in "uncertain inference," the subject of his talk today, the mathematics used often for statistical predictions.

Dr. Fisher is professor of eugenics at the University of London.

G. O. P. Charges New Deal Uses Threats in WPA

By the Associated Press.

The Republican National Committee said last night that New Dealers are trying to win the votes of WPA workers in Somerset and Cambria counties, Pennnsylvania, by telling them "if Landon is elected, all WPA relief work will stop."

The committee said an investigation also showed threats were being used to silence criticism of projects in that district.

In issuing the statement, the Republican committee announced that from now until election is would publish at regular intervals stories "disclosing the subersive methods of the New Deal in its effort to 'buy, boondoggle and browbeat' the electorate." The disclosures, it said, will cover every part of the country.

The Repupblican committee issued its statement as Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Representative Robert Bason (Republican), New York, carried on their running fire for and against the New Deal.

Replying to Bacon's attack on his activity as a "committee of one" for President Roosevelt, the Missouri Senator called his critic "a former prominent Wall Street banker (who) cannot understand the political philosophy of an effort by the party in power to win elections by a direct appeal to the people."

In his statement yesterday, Bacon attributed to the New Deal this motto: "Vote for Roosevelt because he will give you much in public plunder."

The Administration, he said, "now has converted the National Emergency Council into a gigantic campaign organization to furnish New Deal State committees with itemized tables of Administration loans and grants by States in the un-American effort once more to compel unfortunate people to vote for the New Deal on the plea of 'don't bite the hand that's feeding you.'"

Bacon asserted a compilation showing Texas had received nearly a billion dollars in Federal loans and grants was used in soliciting a $250,000 campaign fund in that State.

Traffic Hurts Kill Man; Toll in D.C. Now 58 for Year

Washington's death toll from traffic accidents for 1936 rose a 58 yesterday as one man died and a 6-year-old girl was reported in critical condition from traffic injuries.

William Dolan, 57, of 1532 V street southeast, an employe of the National Capital Parks System fell from a moving truck of that organization at noon yesterday near Twelfth and Vista streets northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations nad contusions of the head and permitted to return home.

Later Dolan began to complain of pains in his head and was removed to Providence Hospital, where last night he died of a fractured skull.

Doris Huff, 6, of 1215½ D street northeast, was crossing the street yesterday afternoon in front of her home when she was struck by a car driven by Robert N. Brumback, 24, of 1537 D street northeast. She was taken to Casualty ospital where she is being treated for face lacerations and a fractured skull.

Ban Is Sought On Milwaukee New Deal Jobs

Suit Filed Here Against Two Rehabilitation Projects.

A group of Milwaukee residents and 32 building and loan associations joined yesterday in seeking injunctions in District Court here to halt construction of two New Deal projects, each to cost $2,000,000, in the Milwaukee area.

One project was a slum-clearance program in Milwaukee City proper, under the Public Works Administration. Under direction of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, 40 acres of land had been bought. More than 500 families were to live there in model homes, completely equipped, to be built by the PWA. The name of Parklawn had been chosen for this project.

The second project, to be called Greendale, is under the direction of the Resettlement Administration, and contemplates purchase of 3,500 acres of ground near Milwaukee, on which homes are to be built, with 1 acre of ground allotted to each. Nineteen hundred acres have been bought and plans laid for the construction of 750 homes, when yesterday's suit was filed.

The complainants charged that the construction of the two projects would mean a raise in tax rates, since the nontaxable properties, when taken over by the Government and thus exempted from taxation, would reduce revenues. They also charged that the city would be forced to supply free fire and police protection, and increase its educational facilities, to maintain this area. Their suits held that these increases would constitute an unfair burden.

Cotton Experts View New Picking Machine

Stoneville, Miss., Aug. 31 (AP).—Cotton experts watched operation of a mechanical cotton picker today and said it was all right in "basic principle," but whether it was economically practical must await exhaustive laboratory tests.

Under a blazing sun, a shirt-sleeved crowd of several hundred cotton specialists, ginners, planters and farm wives looked on as a tractor pulled the machine up and down the rows of cotton at the Delta Experiment Station near here, with a steady stream of white staple pouring from it into a huge hamper.

It was the first of a series of tests planned by its inventors, John and Mack Rust, of Memphis, Tenn.

Supreme Court Appeal Attacks Rail Labor Act

Virginian Lines Protests Ruling on Dispute With A. F. of L. Unit.

By the Associated Press.

An attack on provisions of the railway labor act authorizing collective bargaining betwen representatives of the employes and the carriers was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by the Virginian Railway Co.

It contended the legislation, passed in 1926 and amended in 1934, violates the Constitution by depriving it of liberty and property and attempting to regulate labor relations with employes engaged solely in intrastate activities.

The railroad appealed from rulings by the Eastern Virginia Federal District Court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals requiring it to negotiate concerning disputes with a unit of the American Federation of Labor.

In an election conducted by the National (Railway) Mediation Board, set up by the act, the railroad's machinists, boilermarkers, blacksmiths, electricians and sheet metal workers voted for representation in collective bargaining by "Syestem Federation Number 40" of th railway employes' department of the labor federation instead of by an already existing company union.

Litigation was started by the employes in 1935 in Federal District Court to enjoin the railroad from interfering with theis choice of representatives for collective bargaining.

In its challenge of the act, the railroad told the Supreme Court that compulsory provisions of the legislation compel it "to recognize a labor union as a factor in the conduct of its business and deny to it its inherent right to deal directly, or through other representatives, with such of its employes as desire so to deal."

Northwest Farmers' Cash Income Rises

Minneapolis, Aug. 31 (AP).—Cash income of Northwest farmers in June and July maintained the highest level since 1930 and was above that of last summer, the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis reported today in its monthly review. General business in this Ninth Federal Reserve District, the report said, also was larger than in any month for more than five years.

Government estimates placed the June income of farmers in Minnesota, the Dakotas, and Montana at more than $57,000,000, compared with $31,000,000 for June of 1935.

Corn Shortage Will Curtail Supply of Pigs

50 Per Cent Advance in Hog Prices Forecast for Next Year.

New York, Aug. 31.—The prospect is that the new supply of pigs available to meet requirements next year will be sharply curtailed in view of the damage done by the drought to this year's corn crop, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The present outlook is that the 1936 corn crop will amount to only 1,439,000,000 bushels, or slightly less than the short crop of 1934. This means that the new pig output is likely to be about equal to the small supply of 1935. The pig crop this fall will thus total about 17,000,000 head instead of 26,000,000 head which the farmers were planning to raise. The pig crop will consequently be between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 head smaller than last fall's crop.

The pig crop next spring will total about 32,000,000 head as against 41,884,000 raised last spring. The total supply available for 1937 will therefore amount to approximately 49,000,000 head as compared with 64,578,000 head available this year and with 94,483,000 head in 1933 before droughts and the Government's restriction program became factors in the situation.

The usual seasonal trend is for some recession in hog prices during the latten part of the year. However, in view of the prospective curtailment of the supply, there is not likely to be much seasonal price weakness this year. At the beginning of next year, hog prices are likely to show a sharp advance. Should general deflation set in, this advanced would be modified.

Survey Starts To Add to U. S. Trade Treaties

Return of Sayre to Capital Signals New Drive for Reciprocal Pacts.

By the Associated Press.

In a drive to expand its reciprocal trade program, coinciding with the return yesterday of Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary in charge, the State Department is making a survey of the nations with whom trade pacts might be concluded.

With 14 agreements already signed, negotiations will be opened with as many nations as possible during the next year. Officials said possibly a dozen new treaties might result. Ten months remain before the power given the President by Congress to negotiate such pacts expires.

Sayre has spent the past six weeks on a European trip. But he insisted he had discussed no trade questions.

Officials declined to specify which nations may be approached on possible trade pacts until the study of trade and trade trends between the United States and other nations gives an indication of which might prove most profitable.

British Approached.

Informal and preliminary discussions on trade questions have been held, however, with Great Britain, Argentina, Chile, and several other South American nations.

Since the reciprocal trade program was instituted two years ago pacts have been signed with 14 nations—Cuba, Brazil, Haiti, Belgium, Colombia, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Sweden, Switzerland, Canada, Finland, France and its colonial possessions, and the Netherlands and Dutch East Indies.

All are now in effect, except the pact with Nicaragua, which is awaiting promulgation by the president of that country, and the agreement with Finland, which is expected to be ratified by the September session of the Finnish parliament.

Of the 18 nations with whom negotiations were originally undertaken only four have failed to result in trade pacts.

The Salvador and Costa Rica agreements, chiefly revolving around coffee, are still under negotiation, but are expected to be concluded in the near future.

Negotiations on the proposed pact with Italy were stalmated by the Italo-Ethiopian war and consequent international complications. It is expected, however, that negotiations will be resumed with the arrival here of the new Italian Ambassador, and the arrival in Rome of William Phillips, former Undersecretary of State and new American Ambassador to Italy.

The Spanish negotiations were brought to an end by the bitter civil war in that country and probably will be delayed until after the nation is again at peace.

Provisional trade agreements also have been signed with Czecho-Slovakia and Soviet Russia. The first guarantees most-favored-nation treatment, while under the latter the Soviet agreed to purchase at least $30,000,000 of American goods in return for favored tariff treatment.

Tuberculosis Camp Is Closed; Children Cured

Mrs. Grant Warns That Work Must Be Continued in All Seasons.

The Children's Health Camp, at Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, closed yesterday and the Tuberculosis Association announced that seven children who were treated there had completely recovered from tuberculosis.

Another seven, the association announced, so nearly recovered during the period that another "month of similar care would surely place them in the same class."

Those who were cured are:

Mary Crismond, Josephine Carry, Mary Paxton, Mary Anita Vorce, Dorothy Stewart, Ianthia Charles and Cornelius Hill.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the association, made reports of the cures to the Health Department, warning at the same time that work among tuberculars must not be confined to one season of the year.

"While we are naturally happy over the good showing made by our camp for the children placed in our care," Mrs. Grant said, "I should like to point out that this camp is a practical demonstration of what might be done on a much larger scale if we could only carry on this service throughout the year for all of the children known to be suffering with incipient tuberculosis because of contact with pulmonary cases in their homes."

W. S. Grosskurth, Sousa Friend, Dies

Funeral services for William S. Grosskurth, 79, friend of John Philip Sousa and former member of the United States Marine Band, were held yesterday at the Lee funeral home. Mr. Grosskurth, who died Sunday after a long illness at his home at 409 Fifth street northeast, was buried in Congressional Cemetery.

Sousa gave Mr. Grosskurth a position in the Marine Band, with which he later played for many years. After his retirement from the Marine Corps Mr. Grosskurth played the cornet for several years in Washington theaters. One of the few surviving charter members of the Washington local of the Musicians Union, he retired from professional work in 1921.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Alma M. Maguire, and three sons, William F., Carl W. and Alfred R. Grosskurth, all of Washington, and a brother, Charles, of Vallejo, Calif.

New Laws Held Possible to Aid Drought States

Sufferers All Agree Upon Balanced Economy as a Solution.

By the Associated Press.

Morris L. Cooke, chairman of the drought committee which met President Roosevelt in the Midwest last week, yesterday said the President had in mind a survey of possible new Federal laws "to assist agricultural readjustment and the conservation of water and soil."

Asked on his return to the Capital how long it would take to complete the rehabilitation program the committee recommended to the President, Cooke replied it had taken the drought area "30 years to get that way and it should not be too much to ask 20 to 25 years for reclaiming it."

He said members of the committee returning to Washington after a 2,000-mile tour of the parched region, had been assigned new tasks on instructions from the White House.

Co-ordination Ordered.

"The President directed us to coordinate the activities of various Federal agencies now at work in the drought area, and to prepare a reference map on agricultural practices and water conditions to be used in carrying out a rehabilitation program," he reported.

Mr. Roosevelt's decision to proceed at once, Cooke said, was occasioned by "unanimous agreement" among drought sufferers that a balanced economy would save their country.

A balanced economy, he said, would have stopped undirected migration in the drought area, through the operation of State and Federal laws regulating land use and water rights in the interest of the community.

He said it was possible that drought States would adopt the Texas law authorizing county commissioners to institute soil-saving measures where owners were diligent, and the Minnesota grazing-district law pooling resources where community interests were threatened.

"Ready for Program."

"The people out there are ready for our program," the committee leader reported. "Until we found local organizations in such a cooperative frame of mind, none of us had assumed the problem could have been approached so easily."

Cooke said he expected additional instructions from Mr. Roosevelt on the latter's return to Washington, but that in the meantime he would proceed mapping terrain and other topographical features, starting from the southern edge of the plains States.

His basis, he said, will be work already done by the soil erosion service and the Resettlement Administration, which had mapped about 1,000,000 acres in that region. The complete work, he said, will embrace an area 1,400 miles long and 700 miles wide, a total of 400,000,000 acres or about one-fifth of the entire United States land surface.

Thomas Urges Arms Embargo Against Rebels

Socialist Leader Requests Roosevelt to Act in Spanish Revolt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, today sent a telegram to President Roosevelt urging him to order the State Department to refuse permits for the shipment of supplies to the rebel forces in the Spanish civil war.

Describing the war as a dangerous military revolt "engineered by the economic royalists of Spain," Thomas said there have been many instances in which the State Department refused to permit the shipment of supplies to rebels in Latin-American countries and stated the same principle "might well be applied now in the Spanish situation."

"I urge you to reverse the ruling of the Department of State so as to discourage rather than encourage export of supplies useful in war to ports held by the Spanish rebels," he said.

"I also urge you to issue a public statement appealing to the business interests of the United States to refrain from this kind of trade with rebels who have not even established recognition as belligerents in Europe and whose rebellion threatens the peace of the world.

"The policy I am urging ought to be an American policy, not a football of campaign policy. I am therefore sending a copy of this letter to Gov. Landon, Mr. Lemke and Mr. Browder in the hope that each of them will indorse the policy which I am urging upon you and which I shall take the liberty of urging upon the public."

County Delays Action in Fatal Shooting Case

St. Marys Awaits Widow's Word for Prosecution in Accident.

While St. Marys County authorities yesterday awaited word from Mrs. Alfonso Brown concerning her wishes toward prosecuting the persons who fatally shot her husband a week ago, the widow declared she was "not ready to make any statement."

Brown, a 30-year-old painter who lived at 1229 Madison street northwest, died Sunday night in Providence Hospital from the bullet wound he suffered the previous Sunday while fishing from a boat in Herring Creek, 15 miles south of Leonardtown, Md. Blood poisoning was the immediate cause of death.

State's Attorney John Briscoe and Sheriff Bernard Love, of St. Marys County, said yesterday they knew the identities of the persons who were firing from the river bank at seagulls at the time Brown was wounded. They said they believed the shooting to be accidental and would make no arrests until they had learned Mrs. Brown's wishes.

C. D. Burke, 911 K street northwest, who was hunting along the water's edge the day the alleged accident occurred, has offered to allow ballistics expert to examine his rifle to learn whether he fired the fatal shot. Brown was struck in the abdomen by a .22 caliber bullet.

In the boat with the painter at the time was Arthur Mohler, Washington restaurant proprietor. He said when the bullets started whizzing over their heads he told Brown to sit down but the latter, who was partly deaf, was struck before he could be made to understand what the trouble was.

In addition to his wife, Brown is survived by two sons, 10 and 12.

PORTRAIT OF A MAN TENDING A FURNACE

★ IT'S MID-WINTER. There's a howling wind and the temperature outside is as cold as a polar bear on an iceberg. ★ Get up an hour early to fire the furnace? No sir! Not this fellow. Down in the basement his automatic furnace man has already gone to work. His electrically operated Oil Burner has turned itself on while the "lord and master" of the house "pounds his ear". When he finally heads for his shave and shower the whole house is as warm as toast. It's just as easy as that when you have an electrically operated Oil Burner. No coal to shovel . . . no ashes to carry out . . . and, best of all, an electrically operated Oil Burner will heat your home at a cost low enough to fit any budget.

Decide now to install Oil Heat. One finger fires your furnace from the first cold day and that's the end of furnace tending for the whole winter!

By the United Press.

The vanguard of power officials from 50 nations began arriving last night for the opening session Monday of the third World Power Conference, where experts will discuss some of the future uses of electricity in a world still being revolutionized by this type of energy.

Among the first arrivals was Sir Harold Hartley, British railroad magnate and international president of the conference.

The power conference, a gathering held only once every six years, will be unique in many ways, but probably the most interesting feature of the entire proceedings will be Dr. Charles G. Abbot's first public demonstration of his solar ray machine.

Use of the sun's rays to generate power opens up a completely new set of possibilities in the world's economy. It also provides international insurance against the time—believed by scientists to be in the very distant future—when the world supplies of coal and oil will have been exhausted.

Dr. Abbot Renowned.

Dr. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, is world famous for his studies of the sun. Solar ray machines have been made before this, but their expense and inefficiency has made them impractical commercially. Dr. Abbot's machine is unique in its simplicity. Its heat efficiency compares with that of coal at $3 a ton.

Using his device, Dr. Abbot will operate a one-half horse power engine in his demonstration. The machine may be used to pump water, or utilized in refrigeration, air conditioning, cooking, or heating. It employs three parabolic cylindrical mirrors of an aluminum product which concentrates the sun's rays on two concentric tubes of glass, through which passes a chlorinated diphenyl compound. The heat of the sun raises the temperature of this compound to 700 degrees and it is drawn off to be run through a boiler to produce steam.

The sun machine, however, is only one of many novelties prepared for the world's power scientists. In nearby Virginia a farm has been completely electrified as a model exhibit. Electricity milks the cows, cools the milk, pumps water, air-conditions the farm house and even kills the flies that ordinarily a cow would have to swat with its tail.

Proceedings of the conference, which will be carried on in several languages, will be recorded electrically, and delegates will have headphones at their desks through which they will hear translations in their own language of papers being read in some foreign tongue.

Banquet at Station.

September 10 the delegates will hold a banquet. Only one place in Washington was found big enough to hold the 3,000 expected to attend—the main lobby of the Union Station. It will be closed off and especially decorated for the occasion.

At present four groups of delegates are touring the country visiting various American industrial centers—seeing New York's great utilities, the General Electric and Westinghouse factories, Pittsburgh's steel mills, Niagara Falls, Detroit's automobile factories and the great dams of the West and the Tennesee Valley.

Meanwhile exhibits have been prepared at the National Museum here of present-day uses of power, open to the general public as well as to delegates. They tell the story of how the Rural Electrification Administration is trying to electrify the farm homes of America, illustrate power loads and portray technical subjects. One exhibit is a model of Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River, complete even to the electric elevators for salmon, thoughtfully provided so that development of power would not destroy the Northwest's salmon industry.

The papers to be read will cover every conceivable phase of power and will bring world experience to bear on problems of the industry and the Nation.

Wife of Al Smith, Jr. Is Awarded Alimony

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Abram Zoller, of Herkimer, today awarded Mrs. Bertha G. Smith, wife of Alfred E. Smith, jr., $105 per month temporary alimony, and $500 counsel fees. He ruled also that the monthly payments must be increased to $250 per month after January 1, 1937, if trial of a separation suit brought by Mrs. Smith is not held before that date.

Mrs. Smith is the former Bertha Gott, daughter of a retired railroad engineer. She married the son of the former New York Governor October 14, 1924. They separated July 6, 1932, and Mrs. Smith began a separation action in 1933 charging cruelty and nonsupport.

Secretary Ickes Flies to Attend Funeral

Associated Press Photos.

Secretary of Interior Ickes boarding a Chicago-bound plane at Washington Airport yesterday to attend the funeral of his adopted son, Wilmarth Ickes (right), who committed suicide yesterday.

Through an office aid, Michael Straus, he informed newspaper men he "could offer no reason for the death and was going directly to the house to find out about it."

Mr. Ickes declined comment for the present on his son's recent physical condition or when he had last heard from a physician.

The young widow, the former Elizabeth Dahlman, of a prominent Milwaukee family, received word of her husband's death a few minutes after she and the childrne—Donald, 12; Anna, 10, and Barbara, 6—arrived from Mackinac Island, Mich.

Dr. Jay N. Gardner, who examined the body, said Ickes had been dead about four hours when the caretaker discovered the body. Magnuson had been in the habit of waking Ickes each morning.

Shot Through the Head.

Beside the victim, clad in white pajamas on the bed in the first-floor guest room, was a copy of a magazine opened to a discussion of the Spanish civil war. Ickes had been shot through the head. A powder-burned bullet-hole showed above his left ear.

Authorities said their investigation would probably be confined to questioning Mrs. Ickes and Dr. Blatchford. The latter professed no knowledge his patient had tuberculosis.

Police said no note was found.

It was announced definite plans for the funeral would not be compled until after the inquest at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday.

In addition to his father, wife and children, young Ickes is survived by two brothers and a sister, Mrs. Requa M. Bryant. The brothers are Robert and Raymond. Robert and Mrs. Bryant were adopted children of the Ickes, Raymond their son by birth. Wilmarth was originally named James Westfall Thompson, jr., after his father, the first husband of the late Mrs. Ickes. The Thompsons were divorced in 1909 and the Ickes adopted Wilmarth after their marriage. The elder James Westfal Thompson left Chicago in 1932 to become professor of European history at the University of California.

Before the Secretary left Washington, he canceled plans for an address Friday at Columbus, Nebr., in celebration of that towns eightieth anniversary. The word of Wilmarth's death was telephoned to him by President Herbert L. Woolhiser, of the North Shore village where the family lived.

The Ickes were widely known throughout the State before the Secretary became a member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet. Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes had a notable career in her own right as a Republican member of the State Legislature for several terms. Wilmarth's widow's parents, who were summoned here by his detah, are Attorney and Mrs. Louis A. Dahlman, of Milwaukee. Mrs. Dahlman is a sister of John and Michael Cudahy, of the meat-packing family here.

W. F. Whiting, Coolidge's Aid In Cabinet, Dies

By the Associated Press.

Holyoke, Mass., Aug. 31.—William Fairfield Whiting, 72, former Secretary of Commerce, died at his home here today after a long illness.

One of the country's leading paper manufacturers, Whiting was appointed to succeed Herbert Hoover when the latter resigned as head of the Commerce Department. He served in President Calvin Coolidge's Cabinet from August 21, 1928, to March 4, 1929.

Like Coolidge, Whiting was a graduate of Amherst College in the class of 1896, nine years before the thirtieth President. Robert Lansing, onet-ime Secretary of State, was a classmtae.

Whiting became a friend of Coolidge when the latter was Mayor of nearby Northampton. He was known as one of the first "Coolidge-for-President" men.

Although he was keenly interested in politics and was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions in 1920, 1924 and 1928, Whiting never sought elective office.

He was born in Holyoke July 20, 1864, the son of William and Anna Maria Fairfield Whiting.

Whiting married Anne Chapin, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Edward M. Chapin, October 19, 1892. They celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary last year.

Tens of Thousands Hail Queen Mary on Return

Southampton, England, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Queen Mary was given a conqueror's welcome tonight as she arrived from her record-breaking round trip across the Atlantic. Tugs, speedboats, yachts loaded with pleasure seekers, and steamers escorted the liner to her dock, where tens of thousands joined townfolk and dock wokers in cheering.

The vessel carried one unauthorized passenger on the record-breaking voyage. Dominick Guinta, 25, of Passaic, N. J., surrendered to officers seven hours out of New York, saying he boarded the vessel during a sightseeing tour and became so engrossed that he didn't notice the ship was under way. He was put to work in the galley.

Parked Car Overturns, Injures Girls at Luray

Luray, Va., Aug. 31.—Patrice Rodgers, Luray High School graduate, and daughter of Robert Rodgers, Norfolk & Western agent at Rileyville, was injured seriously this afternoon and her companion, Elsie Fay Noble, daughter of A. R. Noble, State highway boss, suffered cuts and bruises in a freak automobile accident near their home at Rileyville.

The girls went for a walk and climbed upon an abandoned automobile beside the road, the Noble girl getting inside and the Rodgers girl standing on the running board. The car turned over on them.

Crater Search to End.

Julian, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP).—Los Angeles detectives planned tonight to abandon, at least temporarily, their active search in the mountain regions hereabouts for Joseph F. Crater, former New York Supreme Court justice, who has been missing for six years.

U. S. Lines to Seek Bids For $12,000,000 Vessel

San Pedro, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP).—Bids will be received in mid-September on a new 715-foot liner for the United States Lines, expected to cost about $12,000,000, P. Z. G. Mitchell announced today.

Mitchell is vice president of the International Mercantile Marine, parent company of the United States Lines and the Panama Pacific Line. The new liner, he said, would be a sister ship of the liners Manhattan and Washington. Mitchell denied the company was contemplating building a super liner.

WHAT TO DO FOR ECZEMA ITCHING AND BURNING

Wash the affected parts with Resinol Soap and warm water to soften scales and crusts. Resinol Soap is suggested because it contains no excess of free alkali, and is especially suited to tender skin. Dry by patting with a soft cloth—do not rub.

Doctors recommend an oily ointment because it penetrates the outer layers of the skin more effectively. Resinol Ointment meets this requirement, and does even more. For over 40 years it has been—and still is—successfully used to relieve quickly the itching and burning of eczema. It contains soothing ingredients that aid healing.

Use Resinol Ointment today and enjoy comfort tomorrow. Get a jar, also a cake of Resinol Soap, at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 1, Baltimore, Md.

Autoist Sought In Fatal Row With Cab Man

Driver Found in Street by Pedestrians; Petty Traffic Quarrel Blamed.

A petty traffic dispute was blamed last night for the death of William O. Baker, 42-year-old taxi driver, as police pressed their search for an out-of-town motorist wanted for questioning in connection with a downtown mishap Sunday night.

Baker either leaped, fell or was pushed from the visitor's automobile near Fourteenth and N streets northwest after a heated argument. He died a few hours later in Emergency Hospital.

Although varied versions of the incident were given by witnesses, police were inclined to the traffic dispute theory. Baker was seen to jump to the running board of the out-of-town car and cling to the side. A man was driving with a woman on the front seat beside him.

Several words were exchanged and Baker was seen to fall to the street. Witnesses told police that the car stopped several times and the driver apparently attempted to force Baker from the running board. The visiting car, police were told, bore red license plates with white figures. Four States use this type of tag.

As investigators pieced the story together, the out-of-town car bumped into the rear of Baker's cab. Baker, apparently angered, jumped out and an argument followed. The other car traveled several blocks with Baker hanging on the side.

Baker lay unconscious in the street as motorists and pedestrians hurried to his aid. He was taken to the hospital in a passing car. One witness said the out-of-town motorist stopped and helped place him in the ambulance car.

Baker lived at 1408 North Filmore street, Clarendon, Va., with his wife and sons, Boyd, 17, and Thomas, 14. A native of New Bridge, Md., he had been a resident of Arlington County for about 10 years. He had been driving a taxicab for a year. Previously he had been employed as the Washington representative of a New York business house.

Death Investigated.

Police Here Seek Mail Fraud Gang

Police and postal authorities here and Baltimore yesterday were seeking six automobiles in connection with a mail fraud, described as national in scope.

The suspects are occupants of cars bearing license plates from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and New Hampshire.

Officials of the Postoffice Department refused to comment other than to say the phrase "gigantic mail fraud" used in a Baltimore police lookout notice was "exaggerated."

Two Boys Run Away 6th Time, Return Home

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 31 (AP).—Hungry, cold and contrite, the Selig brothers, Clark, 9, and Curtis, 12, were returned to their angry father tonight, their sixth runaway from home in four weeks an ignominous failure.

Police found them near Mount Tabor four days after they disappeared, but there was no ice cream this time, as furnished by police on their previous five jaunts. The boys refused to go back, saying they didn't run away for ice cream, but because they got "walloped" at home.

"I know we're gonna get it again," wailed Clark.

He was right.

Interment of Trotzky Decided on by Norway

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 31 (AP).—Norway appeared tonight to have found a compromise solution to its problem of what to do with Leon Trotzky, Russian exile whose banishment the Soviet government demands.

The cabinet, after earlier indications Trotzky would not be expelled from the country, determined to isolate him under a special guard. Where the former Soviet commissar of war and his wife would be interned was not disclosed.

'Ban Hearst' Seals Basis of D. C. Suit

Dr. D. N. Shoemaker, a retired Department of Agriculture horticulturist, yesterday asked the District of Columbia courts to enjoin postoffice officials from interfering with his intention to send letters bearing "I don't read Hearst" seals through the mails.

Three weeks ago Dr. Shoemaker sent a letter bearing one of the anti-Hearst stickers to the District postmaster, Vincent C. Burke, asking if the letter could travel through the regular postal channels. Burke notified him that the letter with the sticker violated postal regulations and was therefore unmailable.

Dr. Shoemaker, through his attorney, Frederick A. Ballard, charged that Postmaster Burke's action was "a violation of the plaintiff's constitutional rights," and asked that Postmaster General Farley or Acting Postmaster General Howes also be enjoined.

Dr. Shoemaker, who lives at 6800 Eastern avenue northwest, said he intends to attach the seals to his letters if the injunction is granted.

Lehman Addresses U. S. W. V. Session

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Gov. Lehman told Spanish War veterans of the Nation in convention here today that "if there should be another war we must make certain conscription on a Nation-wide basis of both our man power and our resources."

"I hope if we ever go to war again," the Governor said, "this country will not permit another group of selfless men to bear all the burdens of war which should be shared by all alike."

He urged that the Nation be ready for war, and said that "there is, I believe, a far wider realization now of the need of preparedness."

Convention officials estimated that nearly 10,000 delegates were here. Tonight hundreds of them, attired in the uniforms of their respective services in 1898, participated in a parade of States. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Federal administrator of veterans' affairs, urged the veterans to apply for pension increases if they desired. He said he had heard that veterans feared appeals for increases would bring a cut in present ratings.

'No One Likes Me,' Boy Writes, Then Kills Self

Erie, Pa., Aug. 31 (AP).—Members of the family of Earl Nelson, 16, of nearby Wesleyville, found his body today and a note beside it saying "no one likes me."

There was a bullet wound in his abdomen.

Coroner W. G. Stroble said the note addressed to the boy's mother said:

"I am tired of going to school. Don't want to go back. No one likes me. Bury me beside father."

Nelson, a tall youngster towering above most boys his age, was to have gone to high school the first time today.

Pay Demanded By Ex-Convict, Once Doomed

Innocent Man Says N. C. 'Bases J-- ice on Size of B \ccount.'

Morristown, N. J., Aug. 31.—Gus Langley, charging that justice in North Carolina "is based on a man's bank account," said today he felt the State should bolster his account because it prepared him seven times for the electric chair and then found he was innocent.

Convicted of a holdup killing in Asheville four years ago, Langley was paroled after the Governor held hearings which established an alibi.

"I was in jail two and one-half years," he said, "sentenced to the death chair seven times; had seven reprieves. It left me in a condition I'll never get over. It's black-marked me for the rest of my life. I feel I should get a good, healthy sum."

A petition was being circulated in Asheboro, N. C., asking the Legislature to compensate him for the time he spent in prison, for painting done while there, for the mental and emotional strain, and for the handicap he has labored under since his release.

Freed in 1934, he went to nearby Morris Plains to live with his mother, Mrs. L. B. Frazier, and a brother. His wife left him, taking with her their two daughters.

"If you have money, you can get away with it," he said in describing crime and its penalties in North Carolina. "There isn't any justice there. Justice is based on a man's bank account.

"I was in the death house six months and many times I was there when I shouldn't have been, when I was being held there illegally.

"I've never felt the same since."

He was paroled in the custody of Edward D. Ballentine, commissioner of public safety in Irvington, and Alexander Patterson, Morris Plains police chief.

"They've both written to the Governor asking for a complete pardon," he said. "That's because the parole is interfering with my work, interior decorating."

"People don't trust a man on parole around their houses," he explained.

He was paroled, Langley said, because he had served 90-days on a chain gang for a prohibition law violation in 1932 and had been arrested for minor offenses.

He declined to say how much he thought he should be reimbursed, leaving the sum to his lawyer.

Phoebe Omlie Resigns Her Aeronautics Post

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Phoebe Fairgrave Omlie, of Memphis, today said she had resigned as special assistant for air intelligence, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, effective September 15.

Mrs. Omlie told Memphis friends she would return to private life after three years in Government service, and would campaign for President Roosevelt this fall. Her husband, Vernon C. Omlie, was killed in the crash of an airliner near St. Louis several weeks ago.

Champion Driver Calls Conditions In Capital 'Worst'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—The first national "safe driving" convention was opened here today with 45 men and 4 women, winners of contests in the States and District of Columbia, as both guests and participants.

Business sessions, beginning tomorrow, will be continued through Wednesday, at which veterans of the highway are expected to produce new proposals for legislators and manufacturers to lessen the dangers of motoring.

Chosen in a contest sponsored jointly by the association and the Commercial Investment Trust Safety Foundation, each driver had a record of at least 50,000 miles of motoring in ten years without an accident or conviction for traffic violation.

J. P. Daugherty, 47, of Denver, one of the delegates, said that in driving 970,000 miles in 45 States he found traffic conditions worst in Washington and Baltimore.

Johnson Loses Ground.

Litchfield, Minn., Aug. 31 (AP).—Magnus Johnson, former United States Senator, lost a little ground during the last 24 hours, and today his condition was termed "not so favorable."

King Edward's Ship Hits GrecianBridge

Athens, Greece, Aug. 31 (AP).—With King Edward on the deck, the yacht Nahlin smashed into a bridge today in the strait off Chalkis, on the Aegean island of Euboea.

The yacht, carrying the monarch on a holiday in the Adriatic and Aegean seas, apparently was not seriously damaged. It proceeded after a brief inspection.

The King, unperturbed, waved to a cheering crowd on the Chalkis bank after the collision, in which a motor boat on the yacht was crushed and the bridge damaged.

Reports reaching here indicated the bridge already had swung open to permit the Nahlin's passage, in choppy waters, when the crash occurred.

The Case Of Leon Trotzky.

The Norwegian government has refused to comply with the Russian demand that Leon Trotzky be expelled from the little Scandinavian country. Here is a gratifying reminder that the right of asylum is not yet wholly destroyed in a world where so many nations are forgetting even the ordinary amenities of civilized intercourse.

For years Trotzky has been driven from pillar to post. For a while he found refuge on Turkish territory. Later he lived in France. More recently he has resided in Norway. And in every instance he has been under constant police surveillance.

Not long ago the Norwegian authorities cleared him of charges, advanced by Fascist elements in that country, that he had been using his place of refuge as a conspiratorial base. Now the Russian government has come forward and, on the basis of the evidence presented at the trial of Kamenev, Zinoviev and the others lately executed for counter-revolutionary plotting, has demanded that Trotzky be expelled from Norway. Undoubtedly the Ogpu would like to get their hands on this former Bolshevik idol for just as long as it would take to put him out of the way.

Those who accept Moscow's edicts as gospel are probably convinced that Trotzky did actually conspire to have Stalin assassinated. But the rest of the world has its doubts. In any case the stand taken by the Russian government in its note to Norway is more amusing than impressive.

The Russian government itself would be the first to treat with scorn any demand by Nazi Germany for the expulsion of German Communists who might be accused by Berlin of plotting the overthrow of Hitler from Moscow. Nor must it be forgotten that the right of asylum which the Soviet regime would now destroy, so far as its own opponents are concerned, was a right frequently invoked by the Bolsheviks themselves in the past.

The Russian action not only shows a complete lack of humor but will appear to many as the reflection of a panicky state of mind which does not jibe with the widespread assertion that the Stalin regime is building Utopia on a basis of perfect domestic stability. If the Soviet government were as strong and as popular as is frequently maintained, it would certainly have little cause to worry about the activities of an ailing exile living in a state of virtual internment in a distant nation.

Hard On Her Colleagues.

In resigning from her post as Minister to Denmark in order to campaign for President Roosevelt's re-election, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde raised a principle which would prove very embarrassing to the Administration, if there were any risk of its being generally observed.

"I can be of more service if I campaign as a private citizen," she telegraphed the President, "and not as a holder of a public office."

Such punctiliousness is deserving of high praise. But were it to become the general custom for officeholders to resign before rolling up their sleeves to do battle for their party, the turnover would be staggering.

Unfortunately it has long been the custom for politicians, including those in the diplomatic service, to set aside their governmental duties each quadrennium and devote all or a large part of the summer to the Presidential campaign. In fact, as pointed out in these columns some weeks ago, a great majority of our political diplomats have returned to this country to work for Mr. Roosevelt, regardless of the urgency of the problems with which they should be coping at their respective stations.

William Bullitt, erstwhile Ambassador to Russia, is presumably soon leaving for his new post as Ambassador to France, replacing Jesse I. Straus, who has resigned for reasons of ill health. Robert W. Bingham and William E. Dodd have now gone back to London and Berlin respectively. But others who came home this summer for purposes not unconnected with electioneering include: Lawrence A. Steinhardt, Minister to Sweden; John Cudahy, Ambassador to Poland; Grenville T. Emmett, Minister to the Netherlands; Dave Hennen Morris, Ambassador to Belgium, and John Flournoy Montgomery, Minister to Hungary.

Mrs. Rohde's stated reason for resignation must be rather sour reading to these envoys. For it tacitly accuses them of being campaigners of inferior value, even though they left their posts during a very critical period in order to pay political debts.

Remember The Maine!

It is generous, and tactful, of the Secretary of State to assume that the attempted bombing of an American warship off Cadiz was due to a belief of the presumably Spanish fliers that the vessel belonged to the opposing side in that country's civil war. But none know better than Mr. Hull that the true explanation may be far otherwise.

The destroyer Kane was attacked off a section of the coast under rebel control by a plane whose description tallies with some which the revolting forces are known to have obtained from a country whose government is sympathetic with their aims. As is said in the instructions telegraphed to our embassy in Madrid "it is not conceivable that a government plane would knowingly make such an attack." The presumption, therefore, is that the blame for this wanton action, whether or not unwitting, rests with the rebels.

Unfortunately, the logic of the situation in the Spanish civil war operates to confirm this hypothesis. In one way or another an act of aggression against foreign nationals committed by the rebels may be so construed as to react to their benefit. Such acts emphasize the inability of the Madrid government to fulfill the functions of a stable regime, and thereby indirectly magnify the capacities of the opponents of the government. Moreover, there is an inevitable tendency to hold the established government responsible for the acts of its nationals, whether rebellious or not. This is strengthened by the fact that it is extremely difficult to bring home responsibility to leaders of a rebellion which has been accorded no diplomatic recognition and therefore has no standing in international law.

It is, therefore, entirely possible that the attack on the Kane was not accidental. In that case it may obviously be followed by another, and perhaps more successful, effort to embroil this or other countries in the Spanish mess, to the detriment of the hard-pressed government at Madrid. The argument is at least sufficiently plausible to demand the greatest public restraint, not only with regard to the incident which has occurred, but also in respect to any which may lie ahead.

Spaniards, as well as Americans, remember the Maine. They remember that the mysterious destruction of that warship in Havana harbor brought the full force of the United States to the aid of the Cuban rebels against the Spanish government of that day. Even now nobody can say with any certainty who was responsible for the sinking of that battleship. But there is no argument as to the effect of the dastardly action in bringing this country into war.

"Remember the Maine!" The war cry of 1898 seems very applicable now, though in a totally different sense to that in which it was then used. It is recalled now as an object lesson of the ease with which a reckless, desperate, but perhaps deliberately calculated action can inflame popular passions in a way creative of a situation from which there is no withdrawal.

The State Department's instructions specify that in calling the Kane incident to the personal attention of the rebel commander Franco, "no intention as to recognition" is prescribed. This is remembering the Maine to constructive purpose.

Gentlemen's Agreements.

Addressing the Institute of Pacific Relations, Prof. Uyeda, Japanese economist, recently suggested the extension of so-called gentlemen's agreements as a means of controlling Japan's exports and possibly helping to maintain peace in the Far East.

A number of such agreements now in effect are applicable to Japanese goods sold in the United States. However, our abortive efforts to control shipments of Japanese cotton cloth by an informal arrangement of this sort create skepticism as to the value of the gentlemen's agreement when evasion of its provisions is both easy and tempting. In that case, it was decided to raise the rates of duty on certain kinds of cotton cloth under the flexible provisions of the tariff act, applying the increased duties to all imports coming within the specified classification, regardless of the country of origin.

For various reasons, an effective agreement to limit Japanese exports would have been preferable to this mode of procedure. Such agreements are more flexible, less likely to invite retaliation, and more certain to give the desired amount of protection to our domestic industry without destroying import trade. Furthermore, so far as this country is concerned, informal agreements to restrict Japanese exports seem less at variance with the State Department's plans for lowering tariff barriers through reciprocal agreements, than direct action to shut out Japanese goods by increasing import duties.

Nevertheless, gentlemen's agreements are really quota arrangements called by another name. In view of the abnormally low labor costs of Japanese industry and the competitive advantages resulting from heavy depreciation of the yen, additional protection is needed to safeguard some of our manufacturers from a sudden influx of Japanese goods. Whenever that protection can be secured through effective agreements rather than by levying higher duties, it is the tactically wiser and economically preferable mode of procedure.

Whatever the method adopted, however, we should act cautiously, remembering that Japan is our third best customer, only Great Britain and Canada taking precedence. Furthermore, Japan is at the present time buying a good deal more from us than she sells to us, while less than 10 per cent of our imports from Japan offer substantial competition to American products. We certainly do not want to jeopardize this valuable and largely complementary trade by raising tariff rates against Japanese goods unless the provocation is great and no other method of relief available.

The Democratic Way.

Unless the unexpected occurs, the order of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., suspending ten unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, will become effective this week.

The council may be acting with full authority in taking this step, since it customarily exercises wide discretionary powers in giving effect to federation policies. Nevertheless, by refusing to postpone action until the delegates to the annual convention have again considered the questions at issue, the executive council has greatly increased the danger of a permanent split in the ranks of organized labor. It is certainly open to doubt whether a majority of the federation would favor a step that may lead to the expulsion of over a million members and entail a serious weakening of labor's principal protective organization.

President Howard of the International Typographical Union, which is not affiliated with the C. I. O., has suggested that the council hold a referendum vote if it really wants to learn the "attitude of those who finance the A. F. of L. from their pay envelopes." The proposal may come too late to be of practical value, but it would be a really democratic mode of procedure. It would also remove suspicion that the council majority is more concerned in maintaining their personal prestige, and in forcing acceptance of the principle of craft unionism, than they are in representing the interests of labor of all classes and conditions.

Trade union organization problems present knotty questions under any conditions. Factional disputes are unavoidable. Great tactical skill and a high quality of leadership are needed to prevent such disturbances from seriously impairing the effectiveness of organized efforts.

It is very important, therefore, for the officials who guide the general policies of unions to have the confidence of the members. And there is no better way to hold it than to ascertain the sentiments and views of every trade unionist, however obscure, within the ranks. The factional differences that are causing such trouble among lodges belonging to the American Federation of Government Employes, for example, are greatly aggravated by a suspicion that the executive council is not sufficiently representative of the whole group and is disposed to impose a czaristic will instead of executing policies laid down for it.

It is extremely difficult to combine really effective control and management of organized labor with due consideration for the rights of minorities as well as the will of majorities. Yet high-handed methods of action, including exclusive reliance upon the principle of majority rule, create discords that may lead to revolt and secession. Factional disputes can be dealt with in some cases by establishing outside agencies or boards for the hearing of complaints and for giving protection against arbitrary official acts. In the case of the A. F. of L., however, the only certain way to insure progress under united leadership lies in the subordination of personal ambitions by the leaders and in acceptance of a program of action reflecting the needs of the laboring masses.

To Mr. Ickes.

All sympathy goes out to Secretary Ickes in the loss of his son. Coming as it does on the precise anniversary of the death of Mrs. Ickes the tragedy is doubly poignant.

Wilmarth Ickes was scarcely known to the general public. But if he had even half of his foster father's persistence and industry, the report that he was unstrung nervously as a result of overwork and illness can be readily understood. A high sense of devotion itself modeled after one of the Secretary's strongest characteristics, may well have impelled the young man to take his life on the very date his mother was killed in an automobile accident a year ago.

The Nation's deepest condolences will be unreservedly extended to its Secretary of the Interior. Even his habitual courage will be taxed to sustain him in this further bereavement.

Jaywalking.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Jaywalking brings peril not only to the pedestrian but to the occupants of automobiles. Scarcely a day passes that some automobilist doesn't wreck, or narrowly avoid doing so, his machine in the effort to miss some pedestrian who, in violation of the law, appears suddenly before him in an area in which he has the right of way.

To save a few steps or a brief period of time the average pedestrian seems to be willing to take his, or her, life in hand, contemptuous alike of the law and the rights of others. The larger portion of those killed on the streets in automobile accidents are pedestrians who are struck down in areas where vehicular traffic has the right of way and in practically all cases automobilists involved in these fatal accidents are cleared of blame. The willful and deliberate violation of the jaywalking ordinance has become so general among all classes of pedestrians that the law might be as well not be on the statute books.

Correcting Mr. Browder.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Earl Browder, candidate for President of the United States on the Communist Party ticket, at a luncheon in Washington on August 26 implied that he approved of the existing condition in Russia wherein the minority had no press or other method of expressing its views.

Communists and Socialists in the United States of America believe that the press should be free as provided in the Constitution of the United States and as interpreted by the Supreme Court. Even under pure socialism, the Government would have nothing to do with the press.

The Bill of Rights embodied in the Constitution would be maintained, except so far as an amendment to the Constitution would place the power in Government to own or control the means of industrial production and distribution.

This statement is sent to you for the purpose of correcting the statement of Mr. Browder. I am inclined to think he did not clearly express what was in his mind. If he did, he was not speaking for the majority of the American Socialists and Communists as indicated by the writings of Edward Bellamy, (author of "Looking Backward," "Equality"), Eugene Debs, Thomas Mills and other American Socialists.

OBSERVER.

Coughlin "Aboveboard."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I recall with interest your editorial "Watch Coughlin." I have since observed the many articles contributed not only to The Post, but other papers and magazines, condemning Father Coughlin for injecting religion into politics. At the start I want to say that I am not a follower of Father Coughlin, though I frequently listen to his radio addresses. I cannot bring myself to agree on his method of solution of the money situation of this country. On this and many other things advocated by Father Coughlin I am in no wise in accord.

But there is one simple question I would like answered by those loyal 100 per cent Americans who are raving so loudly against this man. Where were they in 1928 when Alfred E. Smith was a candidate for President, and Bishop Cannon, Senator Heflin and others of their ilk were campaigning in this country and preaching to the people that if Smith was elected the Pope of Rome would move to the United States and take charge of the Government.

Disagree with Coughlin as we may, we must admit that Father Coughlin is open and aboveboard in what he advocates.

A HUNDRED PER CENT DEMOCRAT.

Lobbyless Class.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to Government reports, the production of corn for this year is estimated to be 1,439,000,000 bushels, while the normal five-year average is 2,553,000,000 bushels. The production of wheat this year is estimated to be 633,000,000 bushels, while the normal five-year average is 864,000,000 bushels. This has resulted in extremely high prices for both corn and wheat, and the cost to the consumer has, of course, been further increased by the subsidies paid to farmers for limiting the production of these cereals: a burden paid by the consumer himself! And a third influence for high prices is the tax on imported corn of 25 cents a bushel and that on wheat of 42 cents.

It would certainly seem to be true that the American consumer constitutes the only class of citizens which has no friends in Congress, which supports no lobby, and which is robbed unmercifully at every turn. HENRY WARE ALLEN.

Swears By Teachers' Oaths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Gov. Landon objects to public school teachers subscribing to an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States of America, and to defend the U. S. A. against enemies, foreign and domestic, he cannot be a real patriotic American, and is not worthy of being President of this great republic.

I think Mr. Hearst is more to be commended for his stand for the oath than Gov. Landon. Did not Gov. Landon take an oath when he was elected Governor of Kansas? And do not all other people elected or appointed to places of trust do the same thing? Then why make an exception of school teachers?

The public school teacher comes next to the parent in the training of the child and only loyal Americans who believe in our system of Government and who are willing to take an oath to defend the same against all enemies, foreign and domestic, should be allowed to teach in our public schools.

Does Gov. Landon mean to say that he does not believe that officers of public trust should be required to take the oath? It looks like that was a sly way of saying that; and the strange thing about it is The Post commended him for his stand.

Babies Not Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—Truly this is a strange city. Shirley Temple packs 'em in at the theaters, and newspapers can't give readers too much about the Dionne quintuplets. Women stop nursemaids on the street, and, peeking beneath the coverlets, tickle infants under the chin, gurgling meantime, "Oh, how cute."

Now for an anomaly.

My wife and I were looking at an apartment. The rent was pretty high, but we found they were high everywhere. Everything appeared to be all set when the resident manager asked if we had any children. Yes, we said, we had a 5-month-old baby girl. We said it with a note of pride, because, really, the baby is a knockout. But the resident manager was interrupting.

"You see," she was saying, "we don't allow babies or dogs."

We went to another apartment house. Babies and dogs were barred there, too. The next one we visited was different. Here they objected only to babies. The place was fairly overrun with dogs.

Well, I don't know what the answer is. But the next time some old hen stops our carriage and starts to peek inside, I am going to pop her.

Dr. Turner's Analysis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just finished reading a series of four articles in The Post by Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner, on Germany today, and its attitude toward religion, Christians and the Jews.

In my estimation these articles are the clearest and most unbiased portrayal of true conditions in Germany today. More such articles will be appreciated.

World peace can not be gained through paganism and fascism, but through real democracy and Christianity.

Let the pen and not the sword dominate the civilized world, and real brotherhood and not hatred will make it once more a happy, peaceful place to live in.

Gas Vs. Electricity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Any public discussion of the recently suggested program for the purchase by the citizens of Washington of a control of the voting stock of the Washington Gas Light Co. should very properly extend to a thorough study of the extent to which electricity in the not far distant future may reasonably be expected to displace gas for cooking.

Should this purchase program be carried through successfully, it will prove a real handicap to any efforts the city might later on wish to put forth toward securing greatly reduced electric rates through public ownership of its electric light and power system (with or without Federal Government aid).

Social Consciousness And World Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The nations of the world have reached the cross-roads of destiny. They must decide for peace or for war. If their armament races continue to gather speed with each new political development as they have in the past few years, either another world catastrophe of destruction will be the result or the burden of taxation upon the citizens of these nations will produce bankruptcy and revolution. Most living inhabitants today remember only too vividly the horrors of actual combat during the last great war and have learned a valuable lesson from the financial repercussions of its aftermath. But what is the trouble with the world? If we want peace why can we not have it?

May I compare the nations of the world to the cave dwellers of the Paleolithic Age. At that time the individual had scarcely learned to appreciate the importance of cooperation. He had not lived in close enough relationship to his fellow man to learn that two heads were better than one when striving toward the same goal. Instead he was content to declare for the policy of isolation and to accept as his supreme law the survival of the fittest.

But over a period of many years the world's population increased and man's problems became more intricate and out of this situation emerged a social consciousness. First came the patriarchy and then the clan. Later developed the dynasty, the kingdom, the empire and finally the nation as we know it today. This represents not only the progress of the individual, but also the progress of his ability and capacity to adapt himself to cooperation with his fellow man. Today the individual in his role as a nation is struggling for a new social consciousness, not as man among other men, but as large groups of individuals among other groups.

The development of social consciousness is far behind that of industrial science, yet the latter dates back only to the Renaissance of the sixteenth century while the other began with prehistoric man over 100,000 years ago.

As nations we have attained some measure of international co-operation but not enough. We need an International Mind and to have this we must become more internationally minded. But we need more than the League of Nations idea that we have today. It is necessary to have a League that will work, one with a big stick and an iron fist. It must be a government that can control the nations of the world as if they were individuals.

In order to do this it should be supported by a tax levy upon all of its members. A standing armed force several times as powerful as that of any of its member nations is not only desirable but necessary. Representation in the League should be larger and apportioned on the same basis as that of the Congress of the United States. The World Court should consist of judges who are neutral and who could sit and judge impartially. Instead of attempting to arbitrate wars after they have already begun the League must concentrate more of its attention on getting at the causes of wars; such problems as international trade, stabilizing the currency, colonization and the redistributions of densely populated countries.

Most important of all, let us have a development by the League of a system of education in the schools of all of the member nations, the purpose of which shall be to impress upon each succeeding generation not only the horrors of war but the futility of nationalism and the necessity of an international social consciousness.

The policy of isolation is doomed because the ramifications of international trade alone preclude it. Neither as nations nor as individuals can we remain like the cave dwellers of a bygone age. Soon all of the world must not only vision but realize what the immortal Tennyson saw in his "Federation of the World." FOY McDAVID.

The Post Impressionist

"Trot, Trot To Market!"

Post Office, Tuesday.

DOWN here in Washington—quite some years before his appearance in the role of a lover of "The Gorgeous Hussy"—John Randolph, of Roanoke, dipped his quill in the congressional ink and penned this opinion:

"Mambrino was perhaps the strongest blooded horse ever bred."

Now, Mambrino was a British animal and sired Messenger. The latter stallion was shipped to Philadelphia along about 1700 and—John L. Hervey, founder of The Horse Review, is our authority—established the first aristocracy of trotters.

Yet, up in New York, Quentin Reynolds taps his typewriter with swiftly flying fingers and promulgates the theory that trotting horses owe their origin to New England, where they evolved the gait best suited to carry them safely over the slippery snow of primitive roads!

There's something wrong here. And your columnist's opinion is:

Wintry New England had not much more to do with the case than the flowers that bloom in the spring.

Of course America is supreme in the trotting world, and always has been—since trotting came into its own. That period might be said to have begun in 1806, when, at Harlem, a gelding named Yankee, of dubious lineage, did a mile in 2:59, although the National Trotting Association, formed for the regulation of "harness racing," wasn't founded until 1869 and although experts consider that a trotting standard was not set up until ten years later. Even an Englishman—even the Encyclopedia Britannica—will admit:

"The standard-bred trotter . . . by far the youngest of any subspecies of the equine race . . . enjoys the distinction of being the only variety of modern domestic animal which is (both) an American product and occupies a position of recognized supremacy the world over."

High in any international Hall of Equine Fame should stand statues of 2:14 Goldsmith Maid, the biggest money-making horse of all time and place; Jay-Eye-See, 2:10; Nancy Hanks, 2:04, and Lou Dillon, 1:58½.

But these animals are developments—however superb. They aren't origins. Not long since, the Portland Oregonian declared that to know how the American trotting horse originated, one must go back about two centuries to England.

At that time—when the English thoroughbred had been produced by importations of Arabian, Barbary and Turkish breeds—the horses of the horse-breeding County of Norfolk, crossed with stock from Flanders, evinced a strong inclination toward the trot. A noble line, sprung from Darley's Arabian and the Old Morocco of Lord Fairfax, united with one spun by Black Barb and Lister's Turk—all names then glorious on the British turf—and produced, in 1733, the famous racer Blaze. He, after a great career on the track, was put to stud in Norfolk, and from him came the trotting Norfolk known as the hackney.

One of Blaze's many sons was Sampson. Scandalmongers whispered that Sampson's dam had in her veins Norfolk blood of very vulgar sort; but size and strength and speed there was, from the start, no denying him; perhaps that accounts for both his name and its misspelling. Anyhow, he was one of the track ornaments of his generation and handed down all his good qualities, in increasing degree, to swift Engineer, who passed them along — still increasing — to gray Mambrino . . . .

Trotting grew in Britain.

Meanwhile, in America, the Virginians in particular and Southerners in general had good stock of their own and bought some from aboard. But the New York importations were mostly made by the American Dutch from Holland, for wagon uses. Certainly, New England was out of the picture.

Then came Mambrino's son Messenger.

He was foaled in 1779. He grew to 15.3 hands. He had not achieved his best form when he was sent to America. But in America he proved himself superb—and he arrived at Philadelphia before there reached New York the English stallion Nimrod, full brother (so his owners declared) to England's fastest trotter, Useful Cub.

Irresistibly, one turns back to Hervey's article quoted a couple of minutes ago:

"To the imported English thoroughbred stallion Messenger, son of Mambrino, belongs the credit of being the horse whose blood brought order out of chaos and initiated the establishment of a genuine trotting family."

What have the snowy byways of New England got to do with that?

THE WHIPPING-POST.

"The truck," a local newspaper—other than The Post—assures us, "will carry cool drinks until the officers put their coats back on for good." As yet, however, they remain off backs for ill?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Premature Champ.

I am beginning to feel sorry for Alf Landon, because it looks as if he just ain't there, as Al Smith said of young Ted Roosevelt the time the kid ran for Governor, and it is sort of brutal to stick a nice, pink-faced novice in there to get his lips split, his nose mashed and his teeth knocked out by a murderous puncher.

Goodness knows why the Republicans ever picked him, but I suppose they were misled by his good looks and personality and his showing in the preliminary class in Kansas, where he looked very good against some trial-horse competition.

Fight managers often are misled that way—impressed because a young fellow strips clean, looks good in his trunks, keeps regular hours and doesn't drink, smoke or chew. They rush the kid along too fast, throw him in against some tough puncher with a couple of scrambled ears and a gnarled nose and get him slapped around so hard that he never regains his confidence and never looks the same again.

• • • •

This Frank Roosevelt is a political Ace Hudkins. He may do a lot of things wrong and leave a lot of openings as he moves in, but nobody is going to dazzle him with stylish footwork or stand him off with a jab, and when he gets in close, with head down and both arms punching, he tears you apart inside with body snatches. True, Alf has a smart, hard-boiled manager handling the bucket in his corner and some very fancy dudes rooting in the front row, but once that bell rang and they shoved him out there the boy was on his own.

He has had a couple of very bad rounds already, and the boys in the corner have been patching him up between rounds and telling him to shut his footwork and use plenty of ring, but it is plain to anyone who knows anything about this racket that the boy is still years away. He was rushed along too fast, an unfortunate sacrifice to the selfishness of his handlers.

Hearst and Ogden Mills and some others have had their hearts set on promoting a champion, and they didn't have the patience to wait and bring him along by easy stages—through Congress, maybe, and the Senate. He is short in both experience and maturity and even carries a coach along to give him lessons in oratory. Did you ever hear of a fighter boxing for the title with a boxing instructor in the corner shouting lessons at him?

• • • •

They say Hearst has got a piece of Alf, but you can hear anything you want to in this racket, and from long observation of Hearst I am inclined to think the boy is just another protege of his. Hearst has had a lot of them in his time, and some of them he managed to bull through the minor titles. But Governors, Mayors and Senators never fulfilled his ambition, for he has always wanted a President, like those Palm Beach dudes of the boom time, who were always shoveling steak and potatoes into big, hungry stevedores in the hope of finding a guy to lick Dempsey or Tunney under their patronage.

I don't think the Hearst connection amounts to any more than that. Rich guys gets curious hobbies. And Hearst is such a changeable bloke that, even if Alf should somehow win the title, he probably would be around calling him a bum a few months later.

Everybody who knows Landon says he is a fine kid, well spoken, intelligent, a clean-living boy and really too honest and decent for the racket. Moreover, he really knows a lot about the theory of the game and can analyze other fellows' stuff in a highly intelligent way, pointing out the strong points and the flaws. But he has't been able to put his stuff into execution, this time, even though his opponent comes walking to him wide open.

• • • •

One thing that they said for him has been thoroughly proved already. They said he could take it, and he certainly has had to take plenty already—both from the crowd and the other guy. This is a heavy gambling fight, and the long-enders on the Roosevelt side of the joint and the parasites who hang around the champion's camp bumming drinks and chiseling dough for themselves, have been riding the poor kid in the most disgraceful show of bum sportsmanship since the night the crowd booed Gene Criqui for getting off the floor eight times in the first round against Johnny Dundee.

Hell! There's no excuse for blasting a boy who is constantly catching them on his chin but keeps his punches up and keeps on wobbling around, with blood in his eyes, knowing he hasn't a Chinaman's chance to win. What is this, anyway—an election or an execution?

Well, it is just too bad they didn't give the boy four more years, because then he might have made it, whereas after this punching the boy is never going to be much good any more. It will take it out of him. You'll see.

Were Jefferson Alive

Scholar Sees Virginian Still Siding With Those Promoting Welfare Of Masses, Never Confusing Ends And Means.

By R. R. Gooch.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Charlottesville.

OF THE MANY striking manifestations of current opposition to the New Deal, none is more curious than the argument that Thomas Jefferson would, if alive today, scornfully repudiate it and its supporters. Such argument, in the mouths of Old Guard Republicans, must appear to anyone with any feeling for the continuity of history little short of amazing. Even more strange, in some respects, is employment of the same argument by Democrats.

The question may be waived as unfair whether oppopents of the New Deal who are so confidently citing Jefferson have ever read any considerable part of his political writings or have ever examined a substantial amount of material really pertinent to the history of the period involved. At the same time, the Jeffersonian Democrats, at least, ought in their own interests to learn more fully from their allies amongst the Old Guard Republicans the possibilities of juggling quotations from Jefferson and facts from the history of his period.

In this way, for example, they could, if they only would, easily avoid their embarrassment about the word Republican. As a scholarly member of the Old Guard recently reminded a public gathering assembled only a few miles from Jefferson's home, the supporters of Jefferson were, after all, first called republican.

The Jeffersonian Democrats, in harking back to Jefferson and his times, may not only find historical support for becoming Republicans; they may also easily justify themselves for abandoning the term Democratic. Jefferson and his supporters were after all first called democrats because, at the time, the term was, in the eyes of those who employed it, the most opprobrious that could be found. Surely, no respect is due an appelation imposed by the enemies of Jefferson.

Jeffersonian Democrats Urged To Consult Histories.

More careful students of history, it is true, may see in historical analogy some difficulties for the Jeffersonian Democrats. However, the difficulties are in reality merely inherent in their adoption of the term Jeffersonian.

An initial difficulty grows out of an important but indubitable fact. The original opponents of Jefferson employed the term democratic because it normally applied to a despised class. This class was composed of the mass of the people. Today, opponents of the New Deal, it is true, can attempt to avoid this fact by declaring that to mention it is to stir up class prejudice; but none the less importance attaches to the clear cut class distinction that was intended.

The situation, so far as the period immediately following the Revolution is concerned, was succinctly stated in a report to his ministry of foreign affairs by the French charge d'affaires in New York, Louis-Guillaume Otto. In October of 1786, he wrote: "Though there are no patricians in America, a class of men exists here designated by the term gentlemen. Because of their wealth, their talents, their education, their families, or the positions they hold, they aspire to a pre-eminence that the people are unwilling to accord them. Moreover, though some of these men have been traitors to the interests of their class in order to gain popularity, a bond prevails amongst them that is all the more intimate because they fear almost all activities of the people as calculated to deprive them of their possessions. . ."

There can be little doubt as to where Jefferson fits into this picture, even though he was away in France at the time that Otto was writing. Thomas Jefferson differed fundamentally from his real opponents in the very matter of his attitude toward the "activities of the people." He felt no fear of the mass of the people.

Returning From France, He Remained Unchanged.

WHEN JEFFERSON returned from France to take office and later to assume power, his basic attitude did not vary. How the analogy between his position and our contemporary situation is to be drawn can be left to the interpretation of individual students of Jefferson and his period. The facts are beyond dispute. He was bitterly opposed precisely because he was on the side of the mass of the people. For this reason, his opponents spoke of him scurrilously and whispered of him obscenely. "They hated Jefferson. They were sure he would wreck the Treasury. They attacked him as not properly respectful of the Supreme Court. They loudly proclaimed that he was determined to destroy the Constitution.

The reason for the vituperative attacks on Jefferson is fundamental. The fact that he was unswervingly on the side of the mass of the people is essential to any consideration of Jeffersonian principles in connection with the present political scene. Those who speak confidently of what Jefferson would think and do today too often lose sight of his genuine democracy. In doing so, they lose sight of the most nearly certain thing that can be asserted about his probable position, if he were alive today. The truth is that no one knows what Jefferson would think, if he were now on earth. But what side he would be on is as certain as anything can be. He would be on the side that interprets the general welfare in terms of the mass of the people.

Nothing can be better established than the fact that the conditions in which the mass of the people now find themselves are extremely different from those that Jefferson knew. The agricultural conditions that he asserted to be essential to the success of political democracy have given way to the industrial conditions that he feared. Many of the things he warned against have come to pass. It is barely conceivable, though extremely unlikely, that Jefferson, if he were alive today, might stand aloof from the mess in which things are on the grounds that his warnings were not heeded. He would almost certainly take his stand on the side of the mass of the people. This certainty is buttressed by the impossibility of his being on the other side.

Reviled For Democracy In Early Days Of Nation.

JEFFERSON'S genuine democracy, for which he was so relentlessly reviled, and the great changes in conditions between his day and ours furnish the best key to a rational contemporary interpretation of Jeffersonian principles. These principles were so often repeated by Jefferson and they have been since his time so often repeated that no reason exists why they should be unfamiliar.

He held, of course, that government in general should be confined within the narrowest limits possible and that, in the American system, the national government should be confined within the narrowest possible limits, through a preference for the States. But he nowhere suggests that these principles should be so rigidly interpreted as to make laissez-faire and States rights ends in themselves. On the contrary, it is perfectly clear that he approved these principles only because he felt that, in the conditions, they were favorable to the welfare of the mass of the people.

Jefferson distrusted governmental power because his observation of history led him to believe that governmental power had regularly been used against the welfare of the mass of the people. If he had been asked whether extensive governmental power could not be properly used as well as abused, he would almost certainly have replied that the chances were against it until political democracy should be well established and the mass of the people should have some certainty that political power could be used by themselves in their own interest. But he would readily have admitted that changed conditions might well cause a rigid application of his principles to work against the welfare of the mass of the people; and he would not have been surprised to hear that his principles would one day be invoked by persons who interpret the general welfare in terms of the privileged few.

Thomas Jefferson would never, as is currently done by most of those who speak of Jeffersonian principles, have confused means and end. He knew that he and his opponents were in agreement in thinking that the function of government is to promote the general welfare. But he knew that he and they were not in agreement concerning the terms in which the general welfare ought to be interpreted. He was aware that this was the basic difference between him and them. He knew that differences with respect to means however important, were in a real sense incidental. He would never have understood how principles could be denominated Jeffersonian in any but a formal sense, when those principles were being employed in opposition to efforts to improve the conditions of the great body of the people.

Educator Deplores Violence in World

Appleton, Wis., Aug. 21 (AP).—What he said was a general acceptance of the belief that violence as exemplified in war and strikes is inevitable in existing civilization, was deplored today by H. D. Lasswell, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, who spoke at the Institute of Human Relations.

Dr. Lasswell urged personal renunciation of the theory that some problems can be settled only by violence. The expectation of violence, he said, holds the world in a vice-like grip of cnnatural tension.

The address was the keynote of the first full day of nonsectarian discussion sponsored by the Chicago Round Table of Jews and Christians, which will continue through Friday. The announced purpose of the institute is to break down prejudice in human relationships.

Liking Singleness

By William Lyon Phelps.

Miss Hillis' Book.

This little book is not for men, but for single women. It is called "Live Alone and Like It. A Guide for the Extra Woman." It is written by Marjorie Hillis, has a brief introduction by Frank Crowninshield, has drawings by Cipe Pineles, and is published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.

You can read this book through in two hours, but you cannot forget it in two years.

• • • •

The book is packed with the wisdom of this world. It is not intended to appeal to women who are spiritually minded or who are so intellectual that they need no other resources. Such women are queens. My mind to me a kingdom is, only when the queen has a mind.

But as the majority of women (and of men) do not have a religious vocation, and also do not possess a splendid and richly stored mind (and even both these classes love pretty clothes), this book is going to fill not a long-felt want, but a want in recent years both intense and widespread.

Miss Hillis faces absolute facts without camouflage and without dodging. She takes life just as she has found it and has seen it; you may not like everything she says, but it is easier to dislike than to disprove. And she says a great many wholly admirable things.

• • • •

What I particularly like about the book is that she never tells you to pretend that things are different, but rather to take them as they are and conquer them. Take it and like it. For we are apt to like a game where we excel.

She gives general principles to fit each common situation, and then illustrates these principles by concrete instances.

This is a woman's book, for a woman, of a woman, and by a woman. What business has a man reviewing it?

Well, Frank Crowninshield wrote the introduction, and he ventures to give advice, which I should never dare to do. He suggests that women who wish to be popular had better not talk about things they don't understand to people who do, and vice versa. Also don't wear a backless gown if you have an over-vertebrate back.

• • • •

In reading this book, I am once more reminded how different women are from men. Eating breakfast in bed is here regarded as one of the delights of life; it is taken seriously. It is indeed a great art; for how do you balance the tray, how do you drink the coffee, and how do you keep toast-crumbs off your night-clothes? Toast is crumby.

I think this book will have an enormous sale. And it deserves it.

Ballot 'Elation' Beclouds Issue, Expert Warns

Only Precinct Worker Can Estimate Strength of Nominees, Says Writer.

By Claude Robinson.

For the last ten days James A. Farley, Democratic National Chairman, has been conferring with State leaders at the Biltmore Hotel in New York on party problems and prospects in the home precinct. What the local chieftains have told Farley is not available to the public, but, judging from their interviews with the press, Mr. Roosevelt, in November, is scheduled to win the electoral vote of approximately 48 States.

Political leaders, whether they be Democratic or Republican, are usually not much help to lay observers in judging election probabilities.

Their public pronouncements are made for propaganda purposes and it is difficult to separate fact from fancy. Also, many politicians work themselves into a state of mental elation as the campaign progresses. Sometimes they entertain quite unrealistic notions about the popularity of their ticket with the voters.

Would Shut Off Funds.

The propagandistic aspect of pre-election forecasts by political leaders is readily understandable. No matter how hopeless the cause, the leader must tell his party workers and the public that there is a chance for victory. To do otherwise would dispirit the precinct workers, shut off campaign funds and swell the stay-at-home vote. It would be throwing in the sponge before the fight was over.

When the indications point to an overwhelmingly favorable vote, party leaders usually scale their estimates down lest the organization relax its efforts before the vote is delivered at the polls. It is only when the facts fit the needs of propaganda, as in the case where the outlook is for a safe victory, that public forecasts by political leaders can be relied upon.

The factors that cause error in the confidential estimates of political leaders are less well understood.

Politicians customarily measure election probabilities in two ways.

The first is by means of a "dope sheet." Knowing the community in which he lives and the political leanings of social groups that make up the community, he sets about estimating the probable effect that campaign issues will have on these groups. In this reasoning, he juggles past election figures, registration statistics, race and religious prejudices, and demands of special interest groups such as farmers, bonus seekers, labor unions or old-age pensioners.

Frequently he comes out with a shrewd appraisal of voting sentiment. Sometimes he falls wide of the mark, and in this instance the estimate is quietly and quickly forgotten.

The Other Way.

The second technique employed by political leaders in appraising voting sentiment is the precinct canvass. Precinct workers go from door to door, interviewing voters and classifying them as Republican, Democratic, third party or doubtful.

The figures that result from these canvasses are passed along the hierarchy of the party organization from precinct to ward to county to State and finally to national headquarters.

When the party war chest is well filled and the workers are paid for their efforts, these precinct polls are usually quite accurate. A great many reports which come to party headquarters from local leaders, however, are shot through with guesswork or deliberate coloring of figures to impress the higher-ups, and these reports frequently carry a wide margin of error.

The "elation complex" that sometimes seizes political leaders, particularly those on the losing side, is a very interesting phenomenon. It usually appears as the election draws near and the campaign enters its climatic phase. At that time, party workers are straining every nerve to put their ticket across, and their attention is fixed on the much desired goal.

Amid the tumult and shouting that characterize this part of the campaign, even seasoned veterans tend to lose their balance and see ground swells, last-minute switches, and outpouring of the "great silent vote" that will bring victory to their candidate.

In 1920, eight days before he went down to one of the most crushing defeats in Presidential history, Gov. Cox, the Democratic candidate, told newspaper interviewers that a popular tide was rising that would carry him into the White House.

Gov. Cox's Inspiration.

"This change which I have sensed in the minds and hearts of the people," Gov. Cox said, "has had a tremendous effect upon me. It is coming from deep down in the pent-up souls of the people. There is no mistaking its powerful sweep.

"That force is restless, and it is growing stronger every hour. I know it, not because anybody has told me so, but because I feel it. Everywhere the people are rising like a torrent."

Al Smith, in 1928, was similarly confident that he would be elected President of the United States. After a triumphant ride through the streets of New York, with people jamming the sidewalks and shouting themselves hoarse for Al, the Governor was asked by reporters what this mass enthusiasm meant.

He replied with perfect sincerity and conviction: "It means victory. It is in the air."

Candidates, of course, are pumped with enthusiasm by their managers in order that they will put on a good show. But managers themselves are not immune to an inflated view of their election prospects.

A number of bona fide party reports came under this writer's view in 1932, and the accuracy of the average report for one party ran about as follows: County will cast 50,000 votes. Candidate X will have 15,000 plurality. Actually Candidate X had 5,000 plurality, an error of about 20 per cent.

Since effective campaign strategy depends upon accurate appraisal of public opinion, it is interesting to note the increasing attention paid by political leaders to returns from canvasses employing the principle of sampling.

Heretofore, straw votes have been largely regarded as newspaper stunts without political significance, but as these canvasses have become more accurate, increasing attention has been paid them by practical politicians.

Cracking Down on Dope

first of next week, so I give him your address to get in touch with you. He is O. K. He is driving in a Plymouth car. He is going to see his sister in Brooklyn and he wants to get something to bring back with him.

"When he talks he stutters, so don't laugh at him. Don't forget to cut me in on a few dollars on each one, as he has plenty of dough. His name is Barney Schaffer. He has a small scar on his chin so you will know him.

"Things are not breaking so good out here, but we can wish for better times. With kindest regards, I am (signed) M— W—, 1227 M —— street, San Francisco, care of barber shop."

Primrose arranged with postal inspectors to have the fake letter postmarked San Francisco. He spent the next two weeks rehearsing a stutter to make it convincing and having fellow agents address him as Barney Schaffer so he would get used to the alias.

Appointment by Phone.

After making an appointment by telephone, Schaffer borrowed a Wisconsin-tagged Plymouth belonging to another agent and drove to the Brooklyn address. Mancuso, or Manha, was a gracious host. He had carefully noted the car's make, the license plates and the scar on his prospective customer's chin.

But the thing that wiped out all suspicion Mancuso may have harbored was the stranger's masterful stutter. After several authentic demonstrations of triple-tonguing, the smuggler-wholesaler was ready to talk business.

They arranged for sale of one kilo (36 ounces) of heroin at $35 an ounce and six cans of morphine at $40 each. The money would be paid upon delivery next day at a large midtown hotel above Times Square.

Workinug as methodically as a spider building its web, the "peddler" shook hands to seal the deal, bade farewell (it took him five seconds to say "G-g-good b-b-b-by), drove to a telephone pay station and, without revealing his identy, arranged to be checked in at the designated hotel.

After obtainihg $1,500 in cash from district headquarters to cover the purchase, Schaffer went to the hotel to spend the night. He prepared to collar Mancuso, assisted by other agents waiting in a room across the hall, the instant the money changed hands.

But a phone call next afternoon caused a switch in plans. Mancuso wanted him to come back to the house for the goods. Schaffer instructed his helpers to follow in another car.

Taken for "Little Ride."

Mancuso wore a grim look when he came out to meet Schaffer.

"Go ahead," he said. "I'm going to take you for a little ride."

So!

The undercover man suppressed any surprise he may have felt at the diabolic implications of the crook's greeting and asked:

"Where's the stuff?"

"Don't be afraid," Mancuso said. "I've got the stuff a little ways from here."

Schaffer: "Listen, you're not going to take me for my money, are you?"

Mancuso: "No. Don't be afraid of that. I've sent stuff out to Detroit and all over the country and I don't do any crooked business."

In Schaffer's car, with reinforcements following, the two men drove a few blocks. They stopped in front of a candy store and got out. A man emerged from the shop, a child clutching his hand. Leaving the youngster on the sidewalk, the stranger entered a parked car and directed Schaffer and Mancuso to follow him inside.

The "stuff" was on the floor of the machine. Schaffer wanted to unwrap the package and look it over before making the pinch. But Mancuso and his friend were impatient.

Primrose took out his handkerchief and wiped the back of his neck, a signal to the agents in the rear that the deal was made.

Breaks for Freedom.

In a few minutes it was all over. Mancuso broke for freedom, but a purposely misdirected shot from the gun of another officer stopped him. The intermediary gave up without resistance.

Forced back into Primrose's car—the Barney Schaffer role was over now—Mancuso threw some papers out the window. They were recovered.

"If you tear up those telegrams and letters, I will show you where the plant is," the drug vender bargained.

Primrose agreed. He tore them up and out the window they went.

The agents following behind, without receiving a signal of any kind, promptly picked up the pieces, which were later assembled. Those messages were the means of blowing the case wide open.

On the night of August 2, one day before Primrose made his first telephone appointment with Mancuso, Guillaume Rozen was strolling along a North River dock when he was seized by three men, blindfolded and thrown into an auto.

Small Fortune Lost.

"What did you do with those packages?" demanded a French-speaking member of the gang.

Utterly mystified at first, Rozen finally realized they were referring to the packets he and Pierre Guette, a fellow seaman, had found while cleaning a ventilator of the S. S. Champlain as the liner was nearing New York Harbor. Fearing the packages contained bombs, the workers swept them overboard.

Unknown to them, Rozen and Guette had destroyed a small fortune in narcotic drugs which were being smuggled to Mancuso. Somebody aboard ship who was "in the know" had witnessed the act and informed Ringleader Mancuso when the vessel docked August 1.

Shackled, beaten, strung up by his feet and burned with matches, Rozen was compelled to "confess" he had sold the drugs for $47. The kidnapers could not use his story of hurling the packages into the sea. They were in the racket for money. They would hold the sailor for ransom.

On August 4 Mme. Rozen received a cablegram stating her husband was in jail and needed 40,000 francs in a hurry. The message was signed by her husband and directed her to remit the money "to my friend Pierre Guette."

Next day there came another cable advising her to watch for a letter. A week later it was delivered personally by Guette, who soon after Rozen's abduction, had been lured to the Brooklyn apartment where his companion was a prisoner. After being held captive eight hours, he was given the letter to deliver and warned to avoid police on pain of death.

The letter:

"My Dear and Beloved Wife and My Dear Angels—Your deception (sic) will be great when receiving this letter in spite of the cablegram that I sent to you. You will not see me in arriving for the reason that I have stolen a certain merchandise which did not belong to me of a value of 40,000 francs. It is absolutely necessary that this sum be handed over to Pierre to be returned to the interested persons in whose hands my life rests.

"If you do not do this thing after reading my letter you would never see me again. Thus in my own interest do that Monday, August 13, at the latest. Above all do not forget that it is useless to talk about that to anybody and that Pierre is the only one to know it and the only one who can save me.

"My pity, my dear Genevieve, for you and the children. I terminate my letter by kissing you strongly and kiss Serge and Yvette for me. A thousand good kisses and caress of you little Yves. Guillaume Rozen."

Broke Lindbergh Law.

Meanwhile, Mancuso had been seized for possessing and selling narcotics, and his henchmen, who were holding Rozen in another section of Brooklyn, had moved the seaman to Philadelphia for safety. In crossing from New York into Pennsylvania they had violated the new Lindbergh law.

The cablegrams between Rozen and his wife which Agent Primrose had recovered at the time of Mancuso's arrest exposed the kidnaping weeks before the victim's release. At the request of the Narcotics Bureau, investigators from the French Surete apprehended Guette when he delivered the letter to Mme. Rozen.

Despite the gang's threat of death if he talked, Guette laid bare the whole affair.

On September 2, exactly one month after his seizure, Rozen was released. Going directly to his ship, which had just arrived in port, he apologetically explained to his superiors that he was no deserter, that he had been kidnaped. They notified police.

Next day 20 Federals swooped down on the Mancusos' Brooklyn apartment and arrested them at the point of sub-machine guns. The smuggler-kidnaper, free under bond after having been arraigned on the narcotics charge, was preparing to flee when the raid occurred. He had been tipped off that Rozen had spilled his story to the authorities.

The frightened seaman, his torture scars still fresh, identified Mancuso as the gang leader and his pretty 25-year-old wife as the woman who had cooked his meals. Subsequently, he picked out the rooming house and grocery-residence where he was held in Philadelphia.

Mancuso got 40 years for the kidnaping and four years on the narcotics violation charge. His wife, Nellie, was sentenced to three and one-half year and two of their aids to a total of 13 years.

And Uncle Sam got, besides the convictions and the satisfaction of breaking up a vicious gang, $100,000 worth of heroin. This was confiscated at the time of Mancuso's original arrest.

The Candidates Dine.

("President Asks Landon to Dine With Him."—headline.)

Franklin: Hello, Governor. I'm glad you decided to dine with me.

Alf—Thanks. I don't find eating with a Democrat, as long as it doesn't become a habit.

Franklin—I hope you're hungry.

Alf—Do you know any Republican who isn't?

• • • •

Franklin—Well, I trust we've got something you like. What is your favorite soup?

Alf—I'd say terrapin only I don't want to be called a Tory.

Franklin—The chef makes very good barley soup.

Alf—What kind of soup?

Franklin—Barley. What made you jump?

Alf—I thought you said Farley.

• • • •

Franklin—Perhaps you'd prefer brain trust consomme.

Alf—What's that? I never heard of it before.

Franklin—You Republicans call it noodle soup. I'll order it. Now what about the entree? Do you like fish?

Alf—No, but it's required of all Presidential candidates that they appear to like it.

• • • •

Franklin—How about the main course? Do you care for chicken potpie?

Alf—Don't drag Hoover into this, please.

Franklin—What do you say to some roast beef smothered with gravy?

Alf (sniffing)—Oh, boy! Imagine asking a Republican after these last four years if he would like gravy!

• • • •

Franklin—Now, what kind of potatoes?

Alf—I think I'd prefer creamed potatoes.

Franklin—I'll take mine boiled.

Alf—Don't you like 'em creamed?

Franklin (confidentially)—Surely, but after all those radio talks about my love of the masses I wouldn't want to do anything out of character. You'll want spinach, of course. All Republicans do. And I'll put you down for some beans. I love beans.

Alf—You've certainly got plenty of 'em in your Administration.

• • • •

Alf—No. Do you?

Franklin—No, but one of us will get plenty of 'em in November. Do you care for plums?

Alf—Even if I did, what chance would a Republican have of getting any with Jim Farley in the dietician's department?

Franklin—Do you care much for sherbet?

Alf—I think he did the best he could considering what he was up against.

Franklin—Who?

Alf—Herbert.

Franklin—I said sherbet.

Alf—Oh!

THE RED PAVILION

By Pauline Stiles

WASHINGTON POST readers may begin today the latest novel from the pen of Pauline Stiles . . . and continue it, daily and Sunday, in The Post.

A GRAND STORY of love and romance with a cinema background . . . handsome Roger Mallard, the hero . . . his lovable old godfather, William Grimwold . . . Velda Manners and Pamella Wyeth . . . and a host of other fine, fiction characters.

Chapter One

And thou—what needest with thy tribe's black tents
Who hast the red pavilion of my heart?
—FRANCIS THOMPSON.

The lights in Mrs. Tibbs' boarding house were shining out from all its Georgian windows as William Grimwold came up Portman square and let himself in the door.

He was worried. Capable and well-known actor that he was, in great demand for the roles of crotchety old majors, he'd been out of a job for several weeks and the money was running low. Then, too, he was deeply concerned over his godson. Grimmy's big heart ached for the boy, just out of the hospital when the armistic was signed two months ago. But this didn't blind him to the fact that Mal was going to be a handful.

Before entering the two rooms which he and young Roger Mallard occupied on Mrs. Tibbs' third floor rear, Grimwold ironed out the worry on his rugged, Roman-nosed face, placed a smile on his lips beneath his gray mustache, and forced a cheerful gleam into his eyes—those deep-set, pansy-purple eyes which endeared him to everybody. He rattled the doorknob noisily and walked into the room.

A tall, thin boy stood in front of a marble grate with his hands clutched on the mantel and his magnificent dark head pressed against a little bronze clock.

"For God's sake, Mal! Leave off that foolishness."

The boy did not change his position. Though his face was in profile, Grimwold had a view of the panic frozen on it.

He walked over and laid a hand on the young man's shoulder.

Grimwold Advises.

"Damn it, Grimmy! Must you creep up on me!" Then a slow flush crept over his throat and face. "Sorry!" he muttered.

Grimwold unperturbably took off his fog-rimmed overcoat, and poured out two whisky-and-sodas. He handed one to Mal and frowning, watched the boy gulp it.

"I say, old chap, quit testing yourself with clocks and watches. Their business is to mark the passage of time. If you co-operate with them along those lines you'd be a lot better off."

Grimwold's fine, deep voice, greatly admired by the London public, came through his lips in tones perfectly aimed at a mark.

"You're right, Grimmy. I try. But sometimes when I'm alone I get to thinking what if the other one should——"

"Nonsense! You hear me perfectly, don't you?"

"Yes, you. But not other people. It's hell! The confusion trying to separate their voices from this infernal din in my head."

"Be thankful for that din. It means you've a stout heart pumping blood through a healthy young body. Which is more than most poor wretches came out of this war with. See here, Mel," he went on more gently, "your doctor tells me that if you'd stop fretting and give your nerves a chance to become adjusted this minor disability you'll be quite all right and will go on comfortably for the rest of your life with the hearing left you."

"If I could only believe that!"

Grimwold brought out a robust Anglo-Saxon oath. He said he'd be hanged if he'd have his peace of mind disturbed any longer by baseless fears. To all intents, a bachelor, deprived as he was of his wife in his youth, he'd done his best to raise John and Sarah Mallard's 8-year-old orphan to be a man. If this boy, now just turned 21, was going to let him down after all these years of devotion, he could go to the devil while Mr. William Grimwold washed his hands.

After this outburst, he subsided into a shabby, chintz-covered chair and with satisfaction watched Mal's spirit stiffen.

"It isn't that I don't realize how hard it is for you, my dear boy. But—why, Great Scott! You've still got a superb body—6 feet 2 in your socks—that most men would envy. And a face and brain that invariably titillate the women. Now, bathe and shave and get into your tails, for we're going to Maude Copley's New Year's Eve party."

"Thank you very much, I don't care to."

"That I should ever have to urge an intemperate playboy like you to go to a party!"

"All that's over."

"Fiddlesticks!"

"Watch Out for H

"I tell you, I can't bear to inconvenience people," Mel said shortly. "I could endure this thing alone, but the deuce of it is, every encounter I make involves the other fellow in it."

"I've yet to see the person who wasn't more than glad to talk to you, Mal."

"Perhaps . . . But now the strain and effort not to make an ass of myself—not to seem totally dumb—wears me out."

"There won't be much effort required at Maude's party," Grimwold blithly insisted. "Dancing and a program. She's got that young actress, Zelda Manners—what a name!—who's been making a sensation rigging herself up like a Rossetti angel and reciting to low music the Fifth Song of Solomon . . . She gives me an acute attack of nausea, but she may give you a laugh. Only watch out for her, Mel, should you meet her. You may think her beautiful eyes are focused on your heart. But in reality, they'll be boring into the left pocket, speculating upon the contents of your wallet."

Mal grinned feebly. He said:

"Dancing and a program are no longer easy."

"Great Scott, Mal! What's become of that old lord-of-creation-and-be-damned-to-you way of yours?"

"When conversation becomes a one-sided guessing game, there isn't much lord-of-creation in it for the guesser."

"Then why the devil don't you frankly lay your cards on the table? People will like you better for it. Especially the women."

"Bid for pity, eh? I suppose you'd have me say to some strange girl I'm anxious to impress: 'Please be sorry for me. I'm one of these good-hear, bad-year people. If you'll be kind enough to take the man's position while we're dancing to permit me to sit at your right—you'll stand a chance to find me charming. Otherwise—a dunce.'"

"Mal, there are times when I wish you were back in the nursery, so I could cane you." Grimwold tried to combat certain memories of Mal's engaged childhood with brusqueness. "As you will," he shrugged. "I'm a bit low myself tonight. I thought an evening out somewhere might be good for us."

• • • •

Maude's Party Begins.

"Grimmy, my darling! So glad you brought him. Mal, how well you look!"

"Whatever you say, Mrs. Copley, is surely the truth."

"Grimmy, this boy of yours is with all his tall inches as straight as a die! His very step gave off a vitality that was contagious. No one at Maude's party appeared more gay and animated than he. "He's got the stuff in him," Grimwold thought. "And he's a damned clever actor."

"Mal," Maude Copley was saying, "when do you start to be our most devastating matinee idol?"

"O, I shall not be idle," Mal replied with the hasty response to questions he'd been acquiring. "I must make good at something—if for no other reason than for Grimmy's sake——" the line of cow punching, with nothing but land and sky and myself and horse alone in a vast peace and quiet."

"Not a bad occupation for a boy just home from the war," Maude agreed. "If you're serious about it, I have a brother in Arizona you might—just a moment. Here's a charming American child I want you to dance with—little Miss Wyeth."

Maude had stopped a small slender girl who was passing by her. She drew the girl forward to receive Mal's bow.

Mal turned to the girl with a forced, but flashing smile.

"May I have the pleasure?"

"When I saw you coming up the stairs, I was hoping this might happen," she smiled back with a glint of childish mischief.

"What have stairs to do with hoping?" Mal groped on, as he swung her into the dance.

Mal smiled down at her provocatively.

"What you say still leaves me at sea."

Pamella Wyeth."

"I beg your pardon!" Mal said quickly, understanding what her name was not at all.

Something rather cold and indifferent in his voice made the girl say defensively: "It is a silly name—handed down from a great-grandmother."

She was an exquisite young thing, hardly 17, Mal decided. Emphatically the kind upon whom he wished to make an impression. If she were a little older, he might have fancied himself in love at first sight. She had an air of assured if she were both puzzled and fascinated by him and trusted him to help her out. Her dark hair, oddly threaded here and there with white, swept back in a definite pure line from her forehead to be wrapped in braids about her small head. He liked the fine, arched line of her brows, the little quizical twist to her lips . . . he hoped to God she'd keep them closed.

But when the end of the dance left them standing in the drawing room door, she promptly opened them.

"I can never get used to your casual English introduction. Mrs. Copley didn't even mention your name. I suppose the wonderful looking man is your father?"

"Mrs. Copley? I think she wants us to go into the drawing room for her program," Mal replied, and left Pamella wondering why this stunning young man should color at a hint for his name, and then decline to give it.

He led the girl toward two chairs placed along the wall and near the little stage which Maude had arranged at one end of the room.

Mal Is Stumped.

"Shall we sit down?" Mal asked as if his happiness depended on her answer.

The girl took a chair which forced him to sit at her left.

"This is my first London party.

"So you're going home in the morning," said Mal as if, with relief, he'd been given something tangible at last. "Then I'll not see you again."

The girl laughed.

"You sound positively glad."

"But I am—that is—I mean——" He added hastily after a glance at her face, "I'm awfully glad I've met you. And perhaps I shall see you again if you live near London."

"Unfortunately, I don't. My home is now in California—though I hail from Kentucky."

Mal leaned toward her very solicitously.

"See here. I feel guilty. I should be introducing you to some one who can entertain you better than I can. Won't you let me?"

"No—no! Don't bother. I'm perfectly satisfied," smiled young Miss Wyeth. But she couldn't honestly think, judging from his expression, that he was flattered.

The room was rapidly filling. Grouped in a ring of potted palms, the orchestra began to play the "Meditation" from Thais. The girl turned to Mal with a twinkling little whisper, which he received with a nod. Whereupon she saw her fine brows faintly pucker.

"Are you discovering that Mrs. Copley has paired you off with the town's worst partner?"

"I'm discovering nothing of the kind," Miss Wyeth assured him, and Mal asked her if she didn't think the room was a trifle hot?

A stout barytone sang with gusto something that had to do with honor and arms. A pianist thundered out an Hungarian rhapsody. This was followed by an ample soprano, determined to do full justice to "Caro Nome."

Mal could see that so far, his little companion didn't think much of Mrs. Copley's program.

"And we might have been dancing," he murmured.

"Oh, yes!"

Enter, Miss Manners.

Pamella looked as if she expected him to take her out. But Mal sat glued to his chair during several other numbers, lifting a mobile eyebrow now and then at Grimwold across the room.

Suddenly all eyes were turned to the doorway where Miss Zelda Manners, the star of the program, was making her entrance.

She was perhaps the first to be inspired to give a dramatic reading of Solomon's song, and her success, until every one had heard her, had been spectacular. But for some time now, there had been a dearth of opportunity. Mrs. Copley's party had rescued her from rather desperate financial straits. And so it wasn't surprising that she had planned to give her patron's guests full money's worth, in the hope, perhaps, that another engagement might be forthcoming.

However, she had scarcely taken two steps into the room, when the inspiration for the contemplated fervor of her performance took on a deeper motive.

As she glided by his chair, her glance swept Mal's rigidly smiling face. There was a look in her eyes as they lingeringly encountered his that made him tingle. He felt himself come hotly alive for the first time that evening . . . By jove, he could scarcely wait to meet this exciting person!

Miss Manners was a tall young woman who had draped her somewhat voluptuous body in a glittering golden-colored robe. Against it her skin, also enhanced by the gold of her hair, shone with luminous pallor. Her finely cut features gave promise of a certain hard sharpening as she grew older.

She stood simply and gracefully in the center of Maude's little stage. After an appropriate pause, calculated to plunge the room into an expectant silence, she began to speak in a lilting voice dominated by a clear perfection of diction.

"I am come into my garden, my sister, my spouse . . . I have drunk my wine with my milk . . . Yea, drink abundantly, Oh, beloved," half chanted this particular daughter of Jerusalem, while she looked directly at Mal.

It was evident that he was only too eager to obey her musical command, and that his deep draft of her special kind of wine was going to his head.

Mal leaned forward, his face grown radiant. He drank in her speech word by word. Miss Manners, firing her greenish eyes upon his startling response to her efforts, drooped her white lids over the bright gleam beneath them, and poured an unusual amount of talent into her performance.

Audience Thrilled.

"My beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest among 10,000," she seemed to be saying for Mal's thirsty ears alone.

"His mouth is most sweet; yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved, and this is my friend . . ."

Miss Manners' full throated and passionate finale seemed to stun her audience into a flattering silence, which was at least broken by a burst of applause mixed with an undercurrent of enthusiastic masculine bravos. With one accord, people got up and began to move forward. In the crush, Mal was separated from his little companion. But he had forgotten her, it must be regretfully stated, in his eagerness to reach the daughter of Jerusalem. He crowded through the throng about her, towering over them and quite easily catching her white lidded glance.

"This is my friend!" she said with a throaty meaning as she stretched out both hands to Mal and drew him toward her, thus seeming to dismiss every one else.

"Miss Manners—may I——"

"You are the Roger Mallard I've heard so much about. Meeting you this way is quite perfect!"

"You know me?"

"I'd know you among 10,000!" Miss Manners softly laughed.

"I must talk to you!" Mal said masterfully. "I must have you to myself. Let's go out of this infernal hubbub."

"Yes. Let's. Perhaps we could be alone in Mrs. Copley's morning room." She looked hurriedly about her. "A cousin of mine brought me here—Oh, there he is dancing with that girl you were sitting beside . . . Now we can slip away," she smiled with a secret intimacy at Mal.

The Gorgeous Hussy

Conclusion

Final Chapter in the Cinema Serialization of Samuel Hopkins Adams' Famous Historical Novel

Someone had seen Peggy with Rowdy in the carriage, and further evidence was offered that she had met him at Gadsby's Inn. While this did not, of course, involve her directly in the self-defense killing of Sunderland, it did create a tempest of talk all over Washington.

The loquacious dowagers to whom gossip was meat and drink went into a huddle, and decided that a formal protest should be filed with Vice President Calhoun.

They did not know that Peggy had gone to visit the dying Randolph, but they had invented an ingenious explanation for the fact that she was alone with Dow. She had accompanied him, they said, to the town of Warrenton for the purpose of immoral conduct, and while under the influence of liquor had provoked a street quarrel between him and Southerland, resulting fatally for the latter.

Peggy normally would have paid no heed to such a fantastic piece of calumny, but now she had her husband to think about. As a national figure, this undercover talk would injure him politically. Eaton himself heard Peggy's story of what happened from her own lips, and never doubted it for an instant.

The committee that waited upon Calhoun included Mrs. Bonfret Beall, the pinch-faced Louisa Abbot and some of the other chief scalpel-wielders of Washington society. Mrs. Beall, as spokeswoman, presented her case eloquently, only the peculiar glint in her eye betraying the morbid hatred she felt for Peggy. She described the alleged actions of the latter as an affront to all principles of decent conduct and said in conclusion:

"We must insist that you as Vice President demand of our misguided Chief Executive that this woman be expelled, once and for all, from our community!"

The Vice President politely said he would present their ultimatum to the President, and Mrs. Beall led her feline drove away.

Meanwhile the wives of Cabinet officers had brought private pressure of their own to bear, and when the President's advisory body next convened the air was thick enough to be cut with a knife. The presence of John Eaton made the situation all the more embarrassing. Finally Secretary Samuel Ingham hemmed and hawed his way to the point at issue: that some drastic action ought to be taken about the wife of the Secretary of War.

"You see Mr. President," he explained, "the unpleasant accusations against this woman are based upon the sworn statements of the most respectable members of our community."

"Ah!" cried Jackson, "I ain't a mentionin' any names, but are these here respectable spew-cats ready to place their claws on the Holy Book an' swear they saw what they say happened? I suppose they was hidden in a corner, disguised as lamp shades."

Secretary Ingham waited for somebody else to break the tense silence, and, when no one did, ventured another word himself.

"The whole thing is very distressing," he said, "but you see——"

"No 'buts,'" shouted Jackson. "By the Eternal, there ain't one of you man enough to bring your proof forward. Git this! An' git it straight! Everyone o' you go to thunder! The Administration kin go to thunder! But I'm goin' to have justice!"

"Old Hickory" had never made a threat in the heat of combat that he was not prepared to carry out, and this case was no exception. Within 48 hours Washington extras carried streamers disclosing the wholesale dismissal of the Jackson Cabinet to avenge the Peggy Eaton slander.

But the battle was not over. Calhoun brought to Jackson's studio the following day Horatio Peabody, a bigoted but extremely influential social leader, whose official title was Chairman of the Society for the Protection of Public Morals.

"Mr. Peabody," said Calhoun, introducing him, "is cognizant of all the facts."

"What facts?" demanded Jackson, with a belligerent glare.

"I have made no statement," said Peabody, awkwardly, "that they were actually witnessed by me, or any of my colleagues, but——"

"Excuse me" said John Eaton, interrupting, "but I think Peggy ought to be here."

Jackson gave a nod of assent, and Eaton stepped to the next room to escort his wife into the study.

"Sit down, honey," said the President. "This gentleman thinks he's found your finger-prints smeared all over the black monument o' Sin." He pounded his fist on the desk with a resounded crack. "But, by Eternal, I been waitin' for this moment!"

He paused momentarily for emphasis, then pointed an accusing finger at Peabody.

"Now git this an' take it home to your scurvy colleagues! Mrs. Margaret Eaton traveled to Warrenton under my express orders to visit the late John Randolph o' Roanoke—God rest his loyal soul!—an' Mr. Roderick Dow escorted her through the request of her own husband, Mr. Secretary Eaton!"

Peggy gave a gasp. She looked at Calhoun and Peabody. They were both speechless.

"Now, my fine Ambassedor o' Public Morals," added Jackson, looking at Peabody and pointing at the door, "git out!"

"Funny," smiled Jackson, "my conscience don't hurt me the way it ought to."

"You've won a great victory for me," said Peggy seriously. "But there's something else on my mind now."

"I don't know what you're thinkin'," said Jackson, "but I do know you're still holdin' the fate of this Administration an' maybe the country, in the palm o' your purty hand."

"That's a great compliment," returned Peggy. "It's a temptation for any woman, but it isn't worth the price."

"What do you mean?" asked the President.

"I mean that no one person, however well meaning, ought to attract so much attention away from the main affairs of state. When they keep talking about me people will forget the real issues of the Nation. If I'm half the person you think I am, there's only one sensible thing for me to do."

"What's that?" queried Jackson.

"Git!" replied Peggy.

Jackson studied her for a few careful moments, a quizzical smile playing over his face. Finally he spoke.

"I guess maybe you're right," he said. "An' I got the answer. How'd you like it if I made John Minister to the Court o' Spain?"

• • • •

It was almost sailing time, and Peggy and John Eaton were the center of an admiring group.

"He pardoned me," answered Rowdy, with a significant glance at the tall figure of the President. Then he took Peggy's hands. "Are you really happy at leaving Washington?"

"Of course," she replied. "Wouldn't you be if you were going to mingle with kings and queens, to say nothing of lowly dukes and duchesses?"

"Even if you don't mean it," Rowdy returned, "you're fooling everybody but me."

Jackson was the last person to bid Peggy adieu.

"Remember," he said, "maybe Spain'll git your purty smile for a spell, but your heart's stayin' right here with me, to help me keep goin.'"

"I reckon you're not half started yet," said Peggy. Jackson laughed.

"There's a new tune," he said, "written by a friend o' mine named Sam Smith. I'm a-goin' to have him an' the boys play it for you."

As the boat glided away the strains of "America" floated across the water, Peggy, eyes filling with tears, stood alone at the stern. "Good-by, John Randoph," she murmured to herself.

Date Chosen For Wedding Of Sub-Deb

Plans Simple Ceremony; to Become Bride of F. S. Hight.

By Jessie Ash Ardnt.

Miss Lucy Matheson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, of Wellington, in Mount Vernon boulevard, has chosen September 19 as the date for her marriage to Mr. Frank Sawyer F ght, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sawyer Hight, of Washington.

All Miss Matheson's plans for her wedding are simple. She has not announced her attendants, but she plans to be married at 11:30 in the morning in the garden, if the weather is fair.

The garden at Wellington is famous for its old and beautiful box hedges. The estate, which was one of George Washington's river farms, adjoining Mount Vernon, was occupied by his secretary, Tobias Lear, and part of the original house is preserved as one room of the Matheson home. Should it rain, the wedding will take plage in the historic house.

If the garden is the scene of the wedding, as the bride has planned, she will be the second of the family to wed there. Her sister, Mrs. William Potter Arnold, the former Miss Julie Matheson, had a lovely garden wedding when she was married three years ago in June. The lily pool, sun dial and a profusion of white lilies at one end of the garden, formed the background for the ceremony.

Miss Margaret Matheson, a second sister of the bride-to-be, made her debut last season at a tea given by her mother at their home, and Miss Lucy Matheson was to have made hers this season but chose to be a bride rather than a debutante.

She attended Mount Vernon Seminary and Finch School, from which her sister was graduated this June. Mr. Hight is a graduate of Choate School and Dartmouth College.

There will be parties next week for the bride-to-be, and her wedding, although it is to be small, will be one of the important social events of the early fall season.

Lillian Moxley Becomes Bride

Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church was the scene of the wedding at 7:30 last evening of Miss Emma Lillian Moxley, daughter of Mrs. Bertha H. Moxley, and Mr. James Edward Richards, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Richards, of Washington and Warrenton. The Rev. C. E. Hawthorne performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Russell H. Moxley, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie, made on princess lines with a long train and finger-tip veil. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and Johanna Hill roses.

Her sister-in-law, Mrs. R. H. Moxley, was her matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. W. C. Herrman, of Linden, N. J., and Mrs. Janet Payne, of Washington.

Mr. Richards had as best man Mr. Lionel Connor, and the ushers were Mr. John L. Hoffman, Mr. Augustus C. Chinn, Mr. Thomas Scrivener and Mr. Fred M. Booth.

Mrs. Richards is a graduate of Central High School and is a member of Chi Sigma Sorority. Mr. Richards is a member of Alpha Iota Kappa Fraternity.

The bride's mother wore a gown of violet lace, and the bridegroom's mother a gown of orchid chiffon. The bridesmaids wore gowns of cotton lace in shades of peach and aquamarine with hats to match. They carried bouquets of talisman roses with contrasting ribbons.

France Acquires New Md. Estate

Friends of former United States Senator Joseph I. France, of Maryland, were interested to learn that he had acquired Cloverland, a famous Maryland estate near Tome Institute, of which he is at present acting president.

The place, bought by former Senator France, was owned at one time by the Heald family. The latest owner was Mrs. Rebecca Murphy, sister of former Senator John A. J. Creswell who was Postmaster General under President Grant.

The house, which is of stone, dates back to revolutionary times and commands delightful views of the river and surrounding country.

Former Senator France will farm his new estate and is said to be looking forward with pleasure to his new role as squire of Cloverland.

The bride wore a long white silk lace gown made with a jacket and a standing collar, and a Juliet cap. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was Miss Audrey Rout, who wore a frock of blue mousseline de soie with an aquamarine sash, and carried red roses. Mr. Simpson was his son's best man.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Hal Austen, Mr. Yeamans Austen and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Yeamans, of Richmond, and Mr. C. Albert Gilson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schroeder and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hudson, of Frederick.

After a wedding trip by boat, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson will return October 1 to reside at 2701 Courtland place.

Red Cross Corps Lists Fall Events

Roll Call and Regatta Is Placed Uppermost on Calendar.

Members of the Red Cross Motor Corps outlined plans for the fall season yesterday at a luncheon at the Kenwood Country Club, their first meeting since early summer, when they gathered at the Congressional Country Club for a similar party.

Mrs. Royal Duncan Gardner is chairman of the group, composed of prominent Washington women and members of the Junior League, all of whom give ten hours or more of volunteer service a week. They are assigned to details at St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Naval Hospital and Walter Reed, transport the veterans to the White House garden party each season and to the President's Gold Cup Regatta, which is soon to be held, take them on boat rides and sometimes to the theater.

Posted at Stations.

They are also subject to call in emergency and serve at the Red Cross stations which are established when large official gatherings draw great crowds in the District.

The annual Red Cross Roll Call and the regatta are the events for which the corps members are now making plans. After luncheon yesterday some of them who were undaunted by the cool weather, went swimming in the Kenwood pool.

Several of the Junior League members and others who usually attend the meetings, are now off on vacations and were not in the group at luncheon. Miss Mary Winifred Brown is in Connecticut; Miss Helen Beattie, in Norfolk; Miss Frances Glover, at Gibson Island; Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler is away; Mrs. Fannie B. Ingram is on a vacation in Canada and the New England States; Mrs. Junior Owens, in Bar Harbor; Mrs. E. D. Pickard, in Massachusetts; Mrs. Karl Schmitt, in the Adirondacks; Mrs. J. B. Longstaff is in Connecticut and Mrs. Grover F. Rich left for the West to spend several months.

Miss Marion Shouse, also a member of the corps, has spent the summer in volunteer service in the Southern mountains and is returning from there this week.

Mrs. Gardner Present.

Mrs. Gardner, who has spent part of the summer in Washington between trips to the South, to Pennsylvania and to New York, was among those present yesterday. She is one of the members of the corps who gives much more than the usual ten hours of service a week.

Others at the luncheon were Miss Gertrude Aldrich, Mrs. Josephine Brewster, Mrs. James G. Cummings, Mrs. J. C. Haskell, Miss Miriam Hartnett, Mrs. Ione Jordan, Mrs. Howard Krimbill, Mrs. William H. Luckett, Mrs. Frederick A. Niethamer, Mrs. John W. Norwood, Mrs. Violet E. Palmer, Mrs. A. L. Roe and Mrs. A. S. Harvey.

Miss Crocker Returns to U. S. After 'Comedy of Errors' Trip

Spent About Ten Days in London, Meanwhile Frantically Searching for Two Friends Who Sailed in Advance of Her.

By Dudley Harmon.

Miss Gertrude Crocker, who for ten days played a leading role in a tourist comedy of errors in London, landed in New York on the Lafayette on Thursday and has returned to her home in Washington.

Miss Crocker spent what was supposed to have been a vacation in a fruitless hunt, by telegram, cable and even Scotland Yard, for two friends with whom she was to have motored through the British Isles. Her friends are Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones, of Washington, who sailed a week before Miss Crocker, and whom she suddenly decided to join abroad.

Miss Crocker expected to be met at Southampton by Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Imbrie, to whom she had cabled the date of her arrival. But when the boat docked there was nobody to meet her, and not even a telegram. So Miss Crocker went alone to London, and called her friends at Dartmouth House, home of the English Speaking Union, only to be told that they had left two days before for the Hotel Maurice in London.

Then the chase began. Miss Crocker called the Maurice, and was informed that Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Imbrie had taken advantage of one of England's ever-recurring bank holidays to go down to Surrey. Wiring to Surrey, Miss Crocker discovered that they had just left on a motor trip through Wales and Scotland.

After frequent frantic consultations with the American Embassy in the London capital, Miss Crocker discovered the number of their car and, having heard that Scotland Yard always gets its man, gave it to that branch of the British police. Meanwhile, in a last desperate effort, she had wired a hotel in

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl Marry Man She Does Not Trust and With Whom She Quarrels Continuously?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 23 years old, am considered nice looking and hold a good position. About a year and a half ago I met a young man nearly five years my senior. At first I didn't care for him except for company, although he seemed to care for me quite a bit. I knew from the beginning he had been married and was not divorced. Soon we were seeing each other every night and have been for the past year.

• • • •

We seemed never to tire of each other and soon we discovered that each of us had really fallen in love with the other. While I am sure of my love for him, I am not so sure of his love for me. Almost every day, in the course of my work, I meet someone who has something terrible to tell me about his past, something connected with his first wife. This discourages me for a while but I soon forget it.

• • • •

For the past three months we have quarreled continuously. He is always trying to catch me in a lie. I know he lies to me although I can't catch him in a lie. Anything I ask him to do he does, and in every way shows that he really does love me. Still, I doubt him and can't help thinking he loves his wife, even though he tells me he has never met a person he cared for as much as he does for me. He thought he was in love before, and then found out he wasn't.

• • • •

Should I marry this man feeling the way I do about him, and hearing all this gossip about him and his wife? I really do love him. I am sure of that. Do you think we could get along? Please help me in some way. Sincerely yours, GINGER.

A Forbidding Picture.

DEAR GINGER: You paint a picture of a man who is untruthful, suspicious, quarrelsome; a man the mere mention of whose name gives rise to a barrage of severe criticism and condemnation from those who know him; a man who pays assiduous court to a young girl when he is not legally free to marry her; a man whom you do not trust because your instinct warns you that he is not to be trusted, and yet you ask me if you should marry him! With this picture in mind, my advice to you is most emphatically not to marry him, but to put him out of your life as speedily as possible and forget him.

• • • •

I doubt that you love him. It is more probable that you are physically infatuated with him, and physical infatuation alone is a pretty poor foundation for marriage. To understand the meaning of love is to know that one cannot love a person whom one does not respect, admire and completely trust. My advice to any man or woman is not to marry a divorced person without first possessing the true facts concerning the breakdown of the previous marriage. It is natural to suppose that those very characteristics which you find so disagreeable in this man brought about his separation from his wife.

• • • •

Since you quarrel continuously now, since he is always busy trying to catch you in a lie, and since you are convinced that he lies despite the fact that you cannot prove it—and these are the reseate days of courtship—the chances are 1,000 to 1 against your getting along more peaceably in marriage. If you marry him, all I can prophesy for you is a cat-and-dog life, ending in the divorce court. M. H.

Virtuous and Lonely.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 23, brought up in a Christian home and taught to live a clean, moral life. I am considered good looking and dress well and men seem to like me a lot at first. I have been out with lots of them, but after having a few dates with and finding that I will not pet or put me and "trying me out," so to speak, up with improper conduct, they do not come again.

• • • •

Just what does a man expect of a girl, anyway, when he takes her for a ride? I like to have boy friends and go around with them in a decent way. I am hoping some day to have a home with a kind husband whom I can love and respect. But where is a decent girl to find a man she can respect? I am lonesome simply because I am a nice girl. MISS TWENTY-THREE.

• • • •

DEAR MISS TWENTY-THREE: Don't be too sure that your virtue is the cause of your loneliness. More probably you are something of a bore, socially. When a man finds a woman genuinely attractive, the fact that she withholds her favors stimulates, rather than dampens his ardor. If I were you, I would go on the assumption that a man expected to be amused and entertained when he took me for a ride. You can be witty, spirited and comradely, or soothing, beguiling and altogether feminine, according to your type, when in the company of men, but it is your business to swing the conversation and the man's mood along channels of your own choosing, if you expect to ward off too-fervid love making. The girl who constantly complains of men's making objectionable passes at her is usually somewhat to blame herself, particularly if all her friendships with men are short-lived.

• • • •

Don't depend altogether on your looks to carry you socially. And don't let all your dates take the form of automobile rides. Try to engineer parties with other young persons, with swimming, dancing, picnicking, boating, or other forms of outdoor recreation as a part of the program. Be well read and well informed on current events. Learn how to lead a man out conversationally. If a man feels that you think him strong and wonderful and wise, he won't find your defense of your virtue an unforgivable affront to his ego. Men are pretty much alike. It's women's tactics in handling them that make them seem different, generally. M. H.

Baked Peach or Apple Dessert Tasty Finale for Light Meal

Turnovers and English Deep-Dish Pie Are Suggested for Varying Menu When Appetites Change With the Season.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WITH THE COMING of September and the possibility of a sudden drop in temperature the housewife will be called upon to vary menus for appetites have a way of changing with the season. Delicious oven-baked or steamed fresh peach or apple desserts will be a popular addition to menus. Both these fruits are to be found in abundance in the Washington markets and they are inexpensive as well as of good quality.

Many of the popular baked peach and apple desserts are so filling as to be almost a meal in themselves, for example, roly-poly, deep-dish pie, dumplings and turnovers, and many of the other fruit desserts that have a cake, biscuit or pie crust dough surrounding the fruit.

The following recipes may be adapted to the use of fresh peaches or apples, and you will find all of them interesting menu additions during the cooler part of September.

Peach Turnovers.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk
Fresh peaches

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Cut the shortening into the flour mixture to the consistency of a coarse meal. Add milk to form a soft dough. Knead lightly. Roll out in a rectangular sheet ¼ inch thick. Cut in strips 3 inches wide and 6 inches long. Brush lightly with softened butter. Place slices of fresh peaches on one half of each strip. Sprinkle with sugar. Fold rest of strip over peaches. Press edges together with tines of a fork. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 to 20 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream. Yield: six turnovers.

Apple or Peach Roly-Poly.

Make a baking powder biscuit dough and roll it into a sheet about one-fourth of an inch thick. Spread it thickly with sliced apples, and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll up the dough as for jelly roll, pressing the overlapping parts of the dough well to the body of the pudding and also press the ends well to prevent the escape of juices. Roll and tie in a cloth, leaving room for the pudding to expand, place on a plate, cover carefully and set in a steamer over a kettle of boiling water and steam 1½ hours. Serve hot with apple sauce or cream or any other sauce desired.

Peaches may be used in place of apples, if desired.

English Deep-Dish Apple Pie.

6 to 8 tart, juicy apples
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon butter
¼ cup water
1 teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg, if desired

Invert a heavy china cup or custard cup in the center of a baking dish two or three inches deep. Line the sides of the dish with strips of pie paste, letting the paste come a little above the edge of the dish. Do not put any paste on the bottom. Fill with apples, pared, cored and cut in slices. Add sugar, spice and water, and dot with bits of butter. Cover the dish with pie paste, slashed to allow the steam to escape, and pinch its edge to the edge of the paste that lines the sides of the dish. Bake for three-quarters of an hour, or until the apples are thoroughly cooked, in a hot oven (450 degrees F. for 10 minutes, then at 425 degrees F. for 30 minutes). When serving, slip the knife under the cup to allow the confined juice to mix with the apple. Serve hot with hard sauce.

Hard Sauce.

1-3 cup butter
1 cup powdered, granulated, brown or maple sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla or other flavoring.

Cream the butter until very soft, then stir in the sugar and the flavoring. Set in a cool place until required for use. A grating of lemon rind or nutmeg, or a sprinkle of powdered cinnamon may be used instead of the vanilla. Cream or milk may be added, with more sugar to make more sauce. This sauce may be used with a hot pudding of any kind.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 24.

ALREADY this perspiring giant of a village begins to show signs of renewed life after its seasonal sluggishness. As the citizens begin to flock back from mountain and shore, dressmakers and milliners are keeping their thousands of girls at a break-neck pace preparing for the flood of business that begins pouring through the shops after Labor Day.

GRACE MOORE.

Again the Hudson River piers are a shambles, with 100,000 travel-weary tourists fighting their way through the Customs. No less than 4,000 came in one recent day, with the mighty Normandie alone toting 1,500. I saw Grace Moore get off the Conte di Savoia, prettily tanned after some weeks at Cannes, and away again to Hollywood to make still another single. In fact, the arrival of Grace Moore from Europe is always an infallible sign of approaching fall—she's a sort of autumn crocus. And now, about this matter of new raiment.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The beloved Elsie Janis seems set to go through with her announced intention of auctioning off her Manor House at Tarrytown and its contents, the proceeds to go to the various charities of the neighborhood. She says that the auction will be held on her lawn on Labor Day, and that she will live in the servants' quarters till the famous old house, Phillipse Manor, is sold . . .

Another play-plagiarism suit has been filed—this time by Edna Buckler and naming the sensational hit, "Dead End," by Sidney Kingsley. Miss Buckler says, in her suit, that it is a steal from her drama, "Money," and that she wants $2,000,000 damages. Plagiarism suits arrive on Broadway at the rate of one or two a season. All are filed against great successes, and, oddly enough, oftenest by women! . . .

DID YOU HEAR about our six babies that were flown into town recently from Wyoming. Yep—six infant antelopes, all thriving on the bottle up to now at our famous Bronx Zoo. Dr. Noback, the zoo vet in charge of the nursery, says his chief trouble lies in keeping cooing visitors from feeding the deer children peanuts and jelly beans . . .

Prowling the sands of the Atlantic Beach Club the other day I saw two happily married ladies who once filled the public eye with beauty and shapeliness. One was Phyllis Haver, the former Sennett bathing girl, who is now the wife of Billy Seeman, rich wholesale grocer, the other, Irene Delroy, once one of the prettiest girls ever to adorn the music show stage. And both could still agitate the Tired Business Man! . . .

Countess Says U. S. Women Not Bossy

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SHE CAME, she saw and she changed her mind about American women—did Countess Daisy di Carpenetto, Italian novelist, who recently visited in Washington on her first trip to the United States.

"They are not bold and bossy and badly dressed," she said in her low, pleasant voice. "Not the ones I've met, anyway. Instead, they are modest, poised, lovely and so accustomed to their freedom they take it as a matter of course. I think they must be the best wives and mothers in the world."

The countess was equally complimentary about the American career-woman and the wage-earner. "Each woman here in public life seems to be two persons—one who works with surprising sincerity; the other who plays as though she could never work! In the daytime, even the expression on her face reveals she has something to accomplish, something to finish before nightfall. But in the evening, her serious look gives away to a gay one as she goes about dining, dancing, having a good time. Seeing her then, you would think she is always the butterfly. The next day, you would know she is not. I admire her, and in many ways I think she is superior to her male contemporaries."

Her impressions of American women thus expressed, the novelist who has won acclaim as the "Italian Edna Ferber" settled back on the divan in her suite at the Mayflower, struck a match to her cigarette and said she hoped someday to write a novel in which American women are portrayed as they really are, "not as most Italian writers have us believe they are."

Contrary to widespread reports, she has observed that feminism "has not assumed hysterical proportions in this country," that it has not wrought the ruin either of the ladies or our land. The fact that feminism has gained no foothold in Italy is not because of Il Duce, she said. "The Italian woman, rather than Mussolini, is the anti-feminist," she said.

"Most of our women aren't prominent in public life because they don't want to be. Most of them aren't ambitious for careers in business or the arts. They just want to be happy, and for them happiness is loving, and being loved, and making a home."

Her own experience has proved that an Italian woman climbing the literary ladder is victim of no discrimination because of her sex. With nine novels, two plays and a number of short stories and newspaper articles to her credit, she has had no difficulty either in getting a publisher or in keeping one.

Yet her career has not always been smooth sailing, for at 18, when her first novel appeared, she became involved in something of a scandal "all because the story was not quite in keeping with the moral standards in my country," she said.

Moralists decried the boldness of the book and the fact it had been written by so young a member of one of the oldest and proudest families of Italy. Readers raised their eyebrows even as they avidly perused its purple pages, and presently they were demanding another novel from the same pen. From then on, the countess has been so busy she hasn't even found time to marry.

Firestone

GUM-DIPPED TIRES GIVE YOU GREATEST BLOWOUT PROTECTION and NON-SKID SAFETY

PROTECTION is not a matter of price. For your Labor Day trip whether it be a few miles or hundreds of miles, the safest tires money can buy are the most economical. This fact has been conclusively proved by the world's largest transportation companies like Greyhound Lines who use Firestone tires on their buses which operate 138 million miles a year and carry 30 million passengers from Coast to Coast and from Canada to the Gulf. These big tire users know that Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires are the only tires built backed by actual proof of blowout protection and non-skid safety.

Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, prevents internal friction and heat and makes Firestone tires run up to 28° cooler. This is why they give you greatest blowout protection.

Tests made on wet, slippery pavements by a leading university show that the scientifically designed Firestone tread will stop a car up to 25% quicker.

Take no chances on your trip. Before you start, have your car equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires money can buy.

Raids Revive Police-Gang Link Rumors

Officers Invade Boat and Cottages, but They Fail to Find Suspects.

Rumors of a "tie-up" between the Warring gang and certain Washington policemen were revived yesterday following the Sunday night visit of a police raiding squad to Colonial Beach, Va.

Ostensibly the raiders were searching only for three hoodlum members of the warring gang wanted in connection with a recent underworld shooting here.

However, the presence in the raiding party of Lieut. Floyd Truscott indicated that the raiders were on the trail of more than these shooting suspects. Truscott is a night inspector. His job is to be on the lookout for errant policemen.

Lieut. Truscott, The Post learned, went to Colonial Beach on a tip that he would find certain members of the Metropolitan Police Department being "entertained" by Charles (Rags) Warring and other members of his liquor and numbers gang.

Raids Fruitless.

Lieut. Truscott did not find any errant policemen. Neither did Lieut. Clement Cox, chief of a headquarters squad that is trying to smash the Warring gang, find the three shooting suspects.

They went aboard the Playtime, the Warring cabin cruiser, a craft reputed to cost $38,000. It was deserted. They raided three waterfront cottages and scoured all likely pleasure haunts. But they came back to Washington empty-handed.

Here the raiders descended on a house in the 5700 block of Kansas avenue, where they found one of the Warring brothers with a young woman who said she was secretary to a Government official. Warring gave the raiders no information of value.

It later developed that the "party" which the raiders hoped to surprise had taken place at Colonial Beach last Friday night.

Denied Reports.

A month ago there were reports that certain policemen were friendly to the Warring gang and that they were getting a "cut" from the gang's haul from the numbers and liquor rackets.

At that time high police officials indignantly denied these reports. The journey of Lieut. Truscott to Colonial Beach now puts the rumors into circulation again.

The three racketeers being sought in connection with the shooting of Joseph O'Brien several weeks ago are Clarence (Cocky) Ware, Vernon Tate and John Sweeney.

During the last seven days, Lieut. Cox and his men have raided at least ten local gambling establishments armed with warrants for the arrest of the trio.

Local racketeers, alarmed by the frequent raids, have indicated they will surrender the suspects "on sight" rather than endure the police "harassment."

Besides Cox and Truscott, the officers who went to Colonial Beach were Detective Sergts. Howard Ogle, Jacob Wolfe, Hugh Robey, B. F. Day and T. M. McVerry.

D. C. Couple Hurt In Delaware Crash

Albert Spletter, a watchmaker with offices in the National Press Building, and his wife were in Beebe Hospital at Lewes, Del., yesterday for treatment of injuries they suffered Saturday in an automobile accident near Millville, Del.

Their 11-year-old daughter, Jean, was with friends at Behtany Beach, Del., the destination of the Spletter family. She suffered only slight hurts.

Mrs. Spletter's back was wrenched and both she and her husband suffered bruises and cuts.

The accident occurred when the car in which they were riding, driven by Isaac Bechtel, of Pittsburgh, collided with an automobile operated by Norman Calhoun, of Oceanview, Del. The Spletters were thrown from Bechtel's car when it overturned.

The watchmaker and his family, who live at Seat Pleasant, Md., were on their way to Bethany Beach for a ten-day vacation.

Abandoned Rail Line Is Urged as Highway

The Washington and Great Falls Highway Association, meeting last night at the Cherrydale Fire House, adopted a resolution calling for the establishment as a secondary highway of the abandoned right of way of the Old Dominion Railway from Cherrydale to Great Falls, Va.

The resolution will be presented soon to the board of supervisors of Fairfax County and the county board of Arlington.

Hoover 'Ghost' Speaks to 200 At Lodge Rally

Justice Workers Hear Two on Dismissal of Eight From F. B. I.

A ghostly figure, his head covered with a black cowl, held the center of the stage at a meeting last night of Justice Lodge, No. 21, of the American Federation of Government Employes in Typographical Temple. He was supposed to be the "ghost" of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"I am the spirit of John Edgar Hoover's better self, which has died long since from the subtle poison of excessive authority," the hooded figure explained to the audience of 200.

"I can return to his body only when that better self is resurrected."

Asked when such an eventuality could be expected, the "ghost" asserted that it was unlikely until Justice Lodge had won its fight for restoration of eight former members of the fingerprint division of the F. B. I., who allegedly were discharged because of labor activities.

Isidor Weisberg, a resigned F. B. I. employe, who is now with the Social Security Board, leveled charges against the fingerprint division, asserting that its experts were paid less than those of the Army or metropolitan police.

He stated that the organization was shot through with "spying and stool pigeons," and said that members of the fingerprint section had by now worked 13,000 hours of overtime for which they had not been paid. "This overtime," he said, "is described on the records as 'voluntary,' but as a matter of fact is nothing of the sort," since the men performing it had "no choice."

Two of the eight "dismissed" men, Sidney Gertler and Irving Latimer, also spoke; Gertler in particular gave a detailed account of his grievances.

Principal speaker of the evening was Nathan Fine, labor worker, economist and author, who explained the cases' significance to the entire labor movement. Fine commented on "the travesty that such conditions could exist in a department called Justice."

CCC Worker Shot Trying to Prevent Arrest of Youth

Lawrence Basey, colored CCC worker, was in a critical condition in Casualty Hospital last night, a bullet in his stomach after he was shot by a policeman at Bladensburg road and M streets northeast.

Witnesses said Officer V. H. Landrum fired at the man when Basey and several others rushed the policeman to prevent his arresting another man who was with them.

Landrum, who was on sick leave, left his home last night when he was informed by a neighbor that a gang of colored boys was disturbing the peace of the neighborhood.

Witnesses said Landrum tried to quiet the youths, but "they continued to holler and whoop." The ocer attempted to arrest one of the group. As he was calling for a station wagon, it was stated, the other youths yelled:

"Yon can't arrest him."

Then the boys, numbering nearly a dozen, rushed the officer.

Director Lauds NYA Aids' Work At Playgrounds

Their 'Real Assistance' Is Noted by Miss Baker, D. C. Supervisor.

The 96 part-time workers the National Youth Administration assigned this summer to the District Playground Department have been successful aids to the various playground directors, Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of the department, said yesterday.

"Although it is too much to expect that they can be given full responsibility, the value to them of supervised apprenticeship cannot be overestimated," she pointed out.

"As aids to directors," she continued, "they have not only learned a great deal but have been of real assistance."

Miss Baker contends, however, that it is a mistake to assume these young people can supplant highly trained and experienced recreation leaders.

"The very nature of their employment," she explained, "is such that their terms of service cannot have the elements of peprmanency required in carrying out a long-term playground program. Thirty-four of this summer's youth workers left when they had obtained employment with the Government or with private concerns."

"That is a highly desirable situation," she added, "since one of the aims of the N. Y. A. is to secure full-time work for young people."

For the last two monthsh most of the 96 part-time workers have helped supervise games and other playground activities.

The department kept a case history of each worker. These show that young people, who at first were discouraged by the hardships of the last feaw years, have gainednew courage and purpose in life while on the job.

$486,407 Loss From Fire Tops '35 Fiscal Year

The total estimated fire loss in Washington during the last fiscal year amounted to $486,407, Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom reported yesterday to the District Commissioners. This exceeded the previous year's loss by $144,973.

"The per capita loss of 82 cents, nevertheless, is substantially lower than that established by fire control authorities as 'very low,'" Schrom said.

The number of alarms reached 5,806, or 449 more than during the preceding year. Of these, 3,611 were turned in by telephone and 2,195 by box.

False alarms numbered 602 and also represented an increase over 1935. Arrests were made in 22 cases and led to convictions in the majority of instances.

Eight incendiary and 25 "suspicious" fires occurred during the year, and investigations made by the fire prevention division and the police led to several arrests, one of which brought about a conviction.

The department made 228,359 fire prevention inspections and served 11,296 notices to abate fire hazards.

Allen Names WPA Merit System Unit

Appoints Spaid, Ballou and Donovan as D. C. Supervisors.

Civil Service Plan Will Be Copied After One Used in Illinois.

The first concrete result of Commissioner George E. Allen's 7-000-mile tour of WPA projects in 24 States was announced last night with the appointment of a 3-man board to supervise a merit system for the District WPA administrative and supervisory staff of more than 500 employes.

Copied after a civil service system operating successfully in Illinois, the plan is intended to put an end to political indorsements in the local WPA setup.

The board comprises W. W. Spaid, of W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and personnel officer, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

The merit system for the WPA administrative staff will be similar to that for regular District employes. No examinations will be required for present employes as they will be blanketed into the civil service system just as other District workers were under an executive order issued by President Roosevelt.

All new appointees, however, will be selected from a list of applicants certified by the special board, following competitive examinations. The same procedure will be followed as in the classified civil service system in operation in peranent executive departments of the Federal Government. Applicants for promotion will have to undergo similar tests.

Because the District WPA was the only municipal agency which heretofore required no civil service status it has been the prey of members of Congress besieged by job-hunters. Commissioner Allen, as District WPA administrator, has borne the brunt of this political pressure, hence his eagerness to end it.

Allen also picked up the idea of keeping WPA jobs about 1 per cent under the Federal quota as a stimulus to workers to take jobs in private industry even though they are temporary.

The assurance that there will be openings in the WPA for them after the temporary job in private industry ends will induce more relief workers to take the risk, Allen believes.

Jimmie Evans Wins Cup at Camp Letts

Jimmie Evans, 14, has been selected as winner of the season cup at Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. summer camp, for boys, it was announced yesterday.

This prize, highest award of the camp, is based on athletic proficiency and all-around qualifications as a camper. Jimmie lives at 2002 P street northwest, and will enter Western High School this month.

David Schreiner, 11, of 1340 Fairmont street, won two cups. David won first place in the open swimming meet for boys under 85 pounds, and also was named the best camper udring the closing two-week period. William Swink, of Florida, won the cup in the open tennis tournament.

The camp was closed following the annual banquet Thursday. James C. Ingram, director, announced that 175 boys and counselors attended, about 35 more than last year.

Witness of Spanish War To Address Club Here

Dr. James Trapier Lowe, who witnessed the early fighting in the Spanish Revolution, today will address the Civitan Club at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. He will tell of his experiences in Spain.

Dr. Lowe, assistant professor in international law in Georgetown University's school of foreign service, went to Europe as a Carnegie fellow in international law.

Roosevelt Orders Dr. Havenner Retained in Federal Service

President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday, has issued an executive order to prolong the service of Dr. George C. Havenner, liaison officer of the Government Printing Office.

Dr. Havenner, long a leader in citizens association work here, will be 70 this month. That is the retirement age for one in Dr. Havenner's type of position.

President Roosevelt's order decrees that Dr. Havenner's service shall be extended for a year beginning October 1.

That Dr. Havenner does not consider the Biblical three score and ten "old" is indicated by the fact he has just built a new home on Albemarle street, in the Forest Hills section.

For many years he was a resident of Anacostia, and the perennial president of the Anacostia Citizens' Association. In 1925, when the Citizens' Advisory Committee was created to advise the District Commissioners on civic questions, he was elected to the group with the highest vote of 30 candidates in the field. He was twice re-elected. From 1928 to 1931 he was president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Born September 23, 1866, in Maryland, Dr. Havenner went to work in the Government Printing Office in 1887. Meantime he was attending Howard University Medical School, which gave him his medical degree in 1888. He continued in the Government service.

He left the Government Printing Office in 1901 to join the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department. In 1903 he became chief of the division of publications of what was then the Department of Commerce and Labor. When Commerce and Labor were separated, he became chief clerk and superintendent of the Department of Commerce, holding the position from 1913 to 1918. In 1919 he became an investigator for the Bureau of Efficiency.

He returned to the Government Printing Office in 1933, following the abolition of the Bureau of Efficiency. Before he went back to the Government Printing Office, however, he served as executive vice president of the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

John Broderick Retires at 70; Watchman Honored at School

Veteran Employe Favors 'Punch-on-Nose' Treatment for 'Toughs.'

In 35 years of making his living as a night watchman, 70-year-old John A. Broderick experimented with most of the approved methods of handling a tough burglar, but found nothing so effective as a good straight right-hand punch to the nose.

Broderick retired yesterday from his nightwatchman job at McKinley High School to spend the rest of his life going to fights and a ball game once in a while.

"I've tried them all," Broderick said of burglar-stopping techniques. "I've rapped them across the shins with my night stick. I've tried several wrestling holds. But the best way, if they really get tough, is to sock them on the nose. Their eyes water, and then they're easy to handle."

Broderick missed one night, he said, his fist connecting with a would-be burglar's teeth instead of his nose. Yesterday he displayed a scar on one of his fingers

Hand Became Infected.

"The thing became infected. It was almost as bad as being bitten by a mad dog."

The worst years, Broderick said, were the 19 he put in as a special officer of the old Center Market, which used to spread out over several blocks around Seventh and Ninth streets and Louisiana avenue northwest. The neighborhood was a tough one, at best, and the temptation of so much food was more than so many empty stomachs could stand, he recalled.

Broderick claims to be the only man to have ridden down Pennsylvania avenue with a calf in a patrol wagon. The calf was recovered stolen property and Broderick, and the policeman who helped him recover it, decided that the only thing to do was to take the "critter" to the First Precinct station house until its owner called for it.

Happier were the 16 years of nightwatching at McKinley. He and the students got along fine, Broderick said. The other day members of the high school custodian staff collected a sum of money which they presented him as a farewell present.

Enough for Vacation.

"It was enough to give me a vacation at Atlantic City, and I want to thank everyone from T. J. Jones, the head custodian, down. I happen to know that some of those people couldn't afford it."

There will be no trip to Atlantic City, however. Broderick is going to spend his retirement present taking trips with as many of his ten grandchildren as may be conveniently rounded up at one time. Already they've gone to Annapolis and twice on the boat to Marshall Hall.

Broderick lives with his daughter, Mrs. Everett R. Clark, 1712 B street northeast, who has two children. Six of his grandchildren are the children of Fire Capt. Edward A. Sweeney. Two more grandchildren were made fatherless by the World War.

Thomas E. Broderick, John Broderick's only son, died of the gassing he took in France. His widow and children live in Chevy Chase.

A.F.G.E. Unit Asks Project For Jobless

WPA Lodge Will Present Request to Hopkins; Program Drafted.

Positions Are Sought for 300 Dismissed by Central Branch.

Establishment of a WPA project for dismissed Government employes is urged in a three-point program of protest against the dismissal yesterday of almost 300 workers from the project control division of the WPA.

The program, which is to be presented to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins today, was drawn up last night at a meeting of the WPA Lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes at the Hotel Washington, called to protest the dismissal notices.

In their program the union urged the following:

First, that a sufficiently large staff be maintained on the projects control division and that all overtime be discontinued to prevent a speed-up.

Project Urged.

Second, that the Government make every effort to absorb dismissed employes, either in the WPA or by placing them on the WPA replacement rolls and making it mandatory for administrators to draw new employes from those rolls.

Third, that a WPA project be established for Government employes to take care of those who cannot be absorbed. One possible project suggested was that of a circulating pool of clerks as prevailed during the war to be loaned around the different agencies as they were needed. Pay on the project would be the same as that of the classified civil service.

The union also indorsed action by its officers to confer with officers of the A. F. G. E. lodge of the Resettlement Administration, whose personnel is also being reduced, on a joint program with which "we can both go to places like the White House with our problems."

Same Preference.

One specific suggestion for such a joint program was that dismissed non civil service employes be given the same privileges in securing civil service positions as war veterans.

A resolution that a letter be addressed to James A. Farley in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, protesting against the dismissal of "loyal Democrats," was voted down after much laughter on the ground that the union was non-partisan.

New Deal Units Against Move To Split Union

Lodges Want to Remain in A. F. G. E., Says Stein, of WPA Branch.

Non-civil service lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes do not like the suggestion that they be formed into a separate organization, Arthur Stein, president of WPA lodge, asserted last night. He declared the units definitely want to remain within the A. F. G. E., and that such a policy is to the interest of both civil and non-civil service employes.

The suggestion for separate organizations emanated from John Arthur Shaw, second president of the A. F. G. E., who, in his appeal for a new protective group, referred to the non-civil service employe as "the forgotten man of Government personnel."

In opposing the proposal, Stein said:

"It is to the advantage of civil service employes for us to be in the same lodge, so that we can both work for an extension of the civil service. If we were to separate and maintain different organizations we'd both suffer."

The proposal is known to meet with favor among the conservative bloc of the federation. In fact, conservatives seriously had considered introducing an amendment at the Detroit convention next month to restrict membership in the lodge to civil service units in the hope of ousting the New Deal lodges.

Earle Theater Policy Change Not Permanent

Vaudeville to Be Dropped for "Anthony Adverse" Engagement Only.

Following the presentation of "Anthony Adverse" the week of September 11, Warner Bros. Earle Theater positively will return to its regular policy of screen and stage attractions, General Zone Manager John J. Payette announced yesterday.

"Following the announcement that we had determined to present 'Anthony Adverse' without a stage show, letters, phone calls, and personal inquiries have poured in, all wanting to know if the change announced for the pre-release engagement of 'Anthony Adverse' would be continued," says Mr. Payette.

"I would like to emphasize that the Earle will present stage shows as in the past following the week's engagement of 'Anthony Adverse.'

"Our decision to make a change was the result of our preview of 'Anthony Adverse,' which proved to be such an unusual and outstanding feature that we felt a stage show, following two and a quarter hours of superb screen entertainment, would be superfluous.

"Following our return to our regular policy, we will present some of the outstanding radio, stage and screen stars as headliners in conjunction with leading screen attractions. The public can be assured that during the coming year they will find their favorites appearing in person on the Earle stage as always."

After Seven Years.

Presentation of "Anthony Adverse" without a stage show will mark the first departure in six years from the Earle's regular stage and screen policy. After 1929, when only pictures were presented, vaudeville was revived at the Earle and has continued popular ever since.

A balanced season of screen productions—ranging from sprightly musicals, gay comedies and romantic stories to epic productions of unusual dramatic power also was announced by Mr. Payette as the motion-picture fare for the Earle Theater during the next three months.

"China Clipper," which opens Friday, will inaugurate the season presenting Pat O'Brien in an original story by Commander Frank Wead, author of both the stage and screen versions of "Ceiling Zero." Bob Crosby and his orchestra will round out the program, appearing in person on the stage.

"Anthony Adverse," with Fredric March playing Hervey Allen's famous hero, will be the second special attraction on the list.

Soon after "Anthony Adverse" will come "Stage Struck," newest Warner musical to engage the attention of Dick Powell, who appears this time in company with Joan Blondell, Warren William and Jeanne Madden.

Others on List.

Other Warner Bros.-First National pictures on the list are "Cain and Mabel," with Marion Davies and Clark Gable;" "Give Me Your Heart," with Kay Francis, George Brent and Roland Young; and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the first popular-price presentation of the Max Reinhardt production.

From Paramount, the Earle will receive "The Texas Rangers," with Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker and Lloyd Nolan; "Go West, Young Man," with Mae West; and "Valiant Is the Word For Carrie," with Gladys George, Arline Judge and John Howard.

The Gaumont-British studios will present George Arliss in "The Nelson Touch;" Jessie Matthews in "Paris Love Song," and Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Nova Pilbeam in "Nine Days a Queen."

The Roadsiders

"AMONG THE MOONSHINERS." The Roadside Theater presents the melodrama in three acts and nine scenes by H. G. McFall, revised and adapted by Anton Hardt and Richard P. Crepke. Staged by Mr. Hardt, with settings by Edith I. Allen, costumes by Dorothy Croissant and incidental piano accompaniment by Louis Malone. At the Roadside Theater. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Counterpointing darkest villainy with brightest faith, the two motifs set into fast action and interspersed with outbursts of melodramatic wordage, "Among the Moonshiners" continues to be the Roadsiders' finest presentation of a theatrical form long out-moded but not forgotten.

A drammer which unblushingly tugs at all human emotions, this particular selection augments words with deeds and then more deeds, progressing to as "smash" a finish as one would care to see.

To what ends Harold Stepler effects his villainy, or how besotten Howard Wierum is re-created by a diet of salt mackerel and the faith of his unwavering wife, Virginia True, or how multiphased Ralph Fowler ferrets out his victim in the cause of justice—all this, and the innumerable other details of the play, need not be recounted now.

These players, together with Harold Minor, Ted Tenley, Clarence Ruesbam, Phyllis Warner, John Turiano and Richard Boulger, give everything they have to their "art"—and, for the Roadside, it is indeed tops.

The direction and technical accoutrements are as fine as the acting. You should see this one!

Black Legion Jurors Will Be Chosen Today

Detroit, Aug. 31 (AP).—Selection of a jury to try 12 men for the killing of Charles A. Poole will get under way in Circuit Court tomorrow with Judge Joseph A. Moynihan taking unusual precautions to prevent members or former members of the Black Legion being seated in the jury box.

It was the roadside "execution" of Poole to "keep him from talking" that led to disclosure of the existence of the terroristic order whose officers have claimed a membership throughout the country in excess of 6,000,000.

Zionists Seek $1,500,000.

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 31.—(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)—Concluding its seven-day conference today, the World Zionist Organization's actions committee indorsed a world emergency campaign for $1,500,000 to assure security of Jews in Palestine. The drive was set for September and October.

Romeo Paves the Way for Dire Disaster

When the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" comes to the National Theater as a road show attraction on Sunday night, new proportions will be lent the pivotal scenes in the tragedy. Here, for example, is a flash of frenzied action when Mercutio and Tybalt engage in the duel in which Romeo's interference results in the death of his stalwart friend, Mercutio, and sets in motion the fateful events that lead to his exile and the tragic consummation of his love for Juliet. Left to right, the principals above are Reginald Denny, as Benvolio; Leslie Howard, as Romeo; Basil Rathbone, Tybalt, and, with his back turned, John Barrymore, Mercutio.

About The Showshops

THOSE who have followed the stage productions of "Romeo and Juliet" down through the years, perhaps from the days of Mrs. Siddons, Fannie Kemble, Ellen Tree, Modjeska, Adelaide Neilson, Ellen Terry, Mary Anderson, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Julia Marlowe and Doris Keane to the more recent times of Laurette Taylor, Jane Cowl, Eva Le Gallienne and Katharine Cornell, will find it necessary to adjust their vision to new dimensions and new perspectives when they view the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film version of this classic tragedy.

BELL.

"Romeo and Juliet" on the screen has been accorded a treatment that no stage ever could accommodate. It assumes a majestic sweep, a grandeur and a picturesque and opulent pageantry that it never has possessed before. And it accomplishes these miracles of visual exaltation without sacrificing any of the beauty, the poignance or the power of Elizabethan Shakespeare. The original text has been retained in sufficient volume to present the whole story of Juliet's tragic love without serious abridgement and no liberties have been taken with the lilting lines of the immortal work. In fact, lines it was rather expected would be deleted from the camera version of the play still are there intact and spoken in complete consonance with the viewpoint and the social practices of the slightly ribald period and place to which they pertain.

All of these heartening aspects of a monumental undertaking, executed with amazing fidelity, magnificence and histrionic perfection, impressed themselves upon those in attendance at the Philadelphia premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" in the Chestnut Street Opera House on Sunday night. A capacity audience, which included the drama desks of the local press, upon the conclusion of the picture—which, by the way, is run off without the interruption of even a brief intermission—accorded it a salvo of applause that bespoke a tremendous appreciation of an authentic masterpiece. It is an impressive specimen of the cinema's most highly developed artistry.

"Romeo and Juliet" here has been transported beyond the narrow confines of a stage to the wide expanses of a living community, pursuing the customary activities of a thriving little Italian city. The action flows smoothly through the events punctuating the lives of men and women engaged in the homely, and sometimes aristocratic, business of living. When the feud between the Montagues and the Capulets bursts into murderous violence in the public square, not only are the combatants visible but the effect of the scandalous outbreak upon the entire town may be followed. Similarly, when frantic effort is made to convey messages to and from Romeo, exiled in Mantua, from his beloved ones in Verona, the mad rides of mounted couriers are shown upon the screen and not merely suggested to the imagination.

It is not the purpose of these remarks, a scant 24 hours after the Philadelphia preview of the picture, to set down a detailed review of the manner in which it has been demonstrated that Shakespeare stands at the forefront of screen authors, but only to prepare prospective customers of the engagement at the National for a version of the immortal old play that will imbue it with a new significance, a new clarity and a rationalized human quality of intimate appeal that no other interpretation ever has approximated.

I do not mean to say that "Romeo and Juliet," in its new manifestation, is a perfect picture. There are certain bits of casting which I look upon as not quite inspired—as I shall attempt to make clear in these columns next Monday morning—and it is just barely possible that in certain scenes Shakespeare's intentions have been idealized a little too much, but the sum total of the picture's effect is so overwhelmingly on the side of integrity, intelligence and a prodigious outlay of time, thought and effort that it easily and inevitably must take rank with the finest achievements of its present, or any other, medium of dramatic expression.

It is confided by those who have been close to the picture's making, since the first inception of the idea on the M-G-M lot, that two years and a half of research and preliminary labor were devoted to the project before it ever was set before a camera; that the finished product represents an investment of something like $2,250,000 and that the future of Shakespeare on the screen may very possibly depend upon the public's reception of this imposing work.

As for the last item, I cannot too strongly commend this subject to any amusement seeker who wishes to be enthralled by what he views upon the screen.

It is superb entertainment, magnificently acted and caparisoned, for the patron who has never heard of Shakespeare as well as for the scholar familiar with every line the greatest dramatist in the English language ever wrote.

If you have not already reserved your seats for the engagement beginning Sunday night in the National, do so at once and be assured of a spectacle the like of which you never before have seen in all your theatrical lifetime.

The junket to Philadelphia, since you ask, was a nicely contrived outing, with which, contrary to an announcement written before the event and published here afterward, Mrs. Irene Weber Sadel had nothing whatever to do—unfortunately. Norma Pyle, that peregrinating publicist of the M-G-M cohorts, was in charge of the safari and saw to it that it included a sumptuous snack on the Adelphia Roof, choice seats at the showing, a small rout afterward and a drawing-room home. My gout is considerably worse!

The new season on Lafayette Square will be inaugurated on Saturday of this week. "I Stand Condemned" was produced by London Films, with Anthony Asquith as director. It is released in this country by United Artists.

56th Birthday Marked By Queen Wilhelmina

The Hague, Holland, Aug. 31 (AP).—The world's senior ruler, plump Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, refreshed by a long holiday in Switzerland, observed her fifty-sixth birthday anniversary here today.

Flags were unfurled throughout the city in her honor. There was little else, however, to mark the celebration for the Queen, who has been on the throne nearly 46 years, retaining her dyke-bound kingdom of 8,000,00 subjects and her colonial empire of 60,000,000 subjects through all the years when Europe's crowned heads were falling like tenpins.

Buying.

Two section chiefs who went the way of all good and faithful public servants yesterday were Mrs. Harold Graves, in charge of the settlement, stating and stenographic section of the General Accounting Office, and Royal Beck, chief of a sub-section of the officers' division of the Adjutant General's Office.

Beck retired after 30 years of service, while Mrs. Graves has been with the G. A. O. for 20 years. Both were honored with retirement gifts from friends and clerks who worked under them. Mrs. Graves with a sterling silver water pitcher and bon-bon dish and Beck with a gold watch.

We couldn't learn what Mrs. Graves intends to do with all the leisure time she will have on her hands, but Beck plans to purchase a garden plot near Washington and putter about growing flowers.

Another public servant retiring yesterday was E. P. Chewning, electrotyper in the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. Before entering the service almost 32 years ago Chewing was a motorman on the old Columbia Street Railway Co. We have been told he was the first motorman to operate an electric trolley.

His hobby was hunting wild turkeys and giving them to friends as holiday and anniversary gifts.

Charles L. Claxon, of the Securities Exchange Commission, is returning this week from a two-weeks' honeymoon. His bride, the former Helen L. Finkle, we understand, is a descendant of John and Priscilla Alden.

We never appreciated what a world of gadgets were needed to run this Government of ours until we went through the supply and purchase section of the procurement division the other day.

The section which serves as a centralized purchasing agency for all of Uncle Sam's establishments in the District has three stockroom floors and a huge sample room containing everything you can think of. At least everything we could think of, from mouse traps and baby rattles to corsets and chewing tobacco were there.

Capt. H. C. Maull, jr., who took us through the sample room, said there were 20,000 different items on the shelves—test tubes and acids for the Public Health Service, blankets and foodstuffs for the Government hospitals; chalk for the District schools and the Army War College. There were 30 different kinds of brushes, 19 varieties of pencils and in one section of the sample room we counted 68 different kinds of office chairs.

All Federal establishments in the District must make their purchases through the procurement division. For items that are used in average quantities the division arranges contracts with private manufacturers and the agencies buy directly from these concerns at the contract prices. Wherever items are used in such volume that large-scale purchases will prove economical the division buys up huge quantities and keeps them in stock.

The stockrooms are divided into three general sections, each roughly three acres in area. On one floor are hardware and similar items, taken care of by Joseph May; on another, food and household accessories, handled by Edward Bleahl, and on the third, stationery and office equipment, with Chester Hopkins in charge.

In the basement is stocked the division's supply of fuel and oil. Last year more than 360,000 tons of coal and almost 90,000 barrels of oil were distributed to Government agencies. Sixty-six trucks are needed to make the deliveries.

Last year the department store did $16,980,000 business with permanent agencies and $232,973,000 of emergency buying. For the WPA sewing projects alone 141,000,000 yards were purchased at a cost of $15,200,000. About 3,000 items are stocked, the average supply being good for three months. When stocks drop below the two-month mark, replenishing orders are placed, usually for a six months supply. The value of the present stock, Maull estimated, was $625,000.

So huge a stock is necessary, Maj. Ralph I. Graves in charge of the warehouse division explained, for the store to fill emergency requests. While we were being shown through the warehouse a wire came in from the Atlanta Penitentiary asking for 12,000 cakes of soap in a hurry. (We wonde what for). Forty minutes later, the soap had been shipped out.

Records kept for one month, Maj. Graves said, showed that it took the store only 14 hours to fill the average order. About 215 deliveries are made each day which demands from two to three trips daily by a fleet of 17 trucks. Largest consumers among the Government agencies are Agriculture and Treasury.

Mrs. Elsie E. Romero, of Agriculture, has dropped us a postal card saying that the Ladies Federal Bowling League, of which she is secretary-treasurer, will meet Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Arcadia Alleys, Fourteenth street and Park road.

Off-hand you wouldn't think that an abandoned coal mine would be the best spot for curing roquefort cheese, but Kenneth J. Matheson, of the Bureau of Dairy Industry at the Agriculture Department assures us that is so.

There are two such cheese mines in the country, one in an old coal mine shaft in Pennsylvania and the other in caves that have been cut into the sandstone bluffs of the Mississippi at St. Paul, Minn. Both have been operated for about a year and have proved highly successful.

The trick of curing Roquefort cheese is a coll temperature and a humidity on the verge of saturation. The mines have been found ideal for the maintenance of both conditions.

A welcome hand to Catharine Watson, who has just ploined the Bureau of Fisheries from the Jefferon Barracks (Md-. Veterans' Hospital. . . . William P. Brown, of Fisheries, has transferred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. . . . Ethel W. Warter, of the public relations section of the Navp Department, is leaving Friday for a vacation at her old Kentucky home. . . . Albon L. Holsey, of Tuskegee Institute, has been appointed an AAA field officer with the new conservation program.

It costs only $98.16 to provide the average school child with a year's education, according to a study just completed by Lula Mae Comstock, of the Office of Education. . . . Another Office of Education specialist.

War Department Veteran Retires

Col. C. H. Danielson, of the Adjutant General's Office of the War Department, congratulates Royal Beck, who retired yesterday after 35 years in the service. The gold watch in Beck's hand was given him by friends.

Culbertson On Bridge

Considering the striking analogy between bridge and war, it is not to be wondered at that the factor of position should play an enormous part in the play of the cards. Almost all players realize this to some extent. Quite probably, for instance, they will bid or double more freely sitting over a hand that has shown strength than if their honors are, so to speak, "under the gun." But the average player does not carry far enough the advantage that his position may give him.

Perhaps the best field in which to capitalize position is in the matter of discards. Often the success or failure of a contract rests squarely on the question of who must discard first, declarer or defender? Consider how easy it would have been for East, in today's hand, to turn to excellent account his strategic position over the declarer.

East, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	NORTH ♠ K J 10 8 ♥ Q 10 8 5 ♦ 8 ♣ A Q 6 4
WEST ♠ 9 6 ♥ K J 4 2 ♦ 7 6 4 ♣ J 10 5 2		EAST ♠ A Q 5 2 ♥ A 9 6 3 ♦ J 9 ♣ K 7 3
	SOUTH ♠ 8 7 4 ♥ 7 ♦ A K Q 10 5 3 2 ♣ 9 8

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	2 diamonds	Pass	2 no trump
Pass	3 no trump	Pass	Pass
Pass

East took warning from the bidding and, instead of opening a spade, led his fourth best heart. West won with the king and made the clever return of a low spade instead of the nine spot, keeping the latter card intact so as to help promote his partner's suit. Declarer played the ten and East won with the queen.

Now, instead of biding his time, allowing dummy to run its seven-card suit and carefully following declarer's discards, East played for a miracle; he laid down the spade ace, on the far-fetched hope of dropping the king in declarer's hand. After that there was nothing to it. With one spade established, declarer never could be stopped from making seven diamonds, one club, and one spade.

It would have been quite a different story if, after winning the queen of spades, East had thrown dummy on lead with a diamond. If declarer had cashed his seven diamonds, he would have found himself in deep water for discards. After the opening lead, and a spade return, and seven diamonds, he would have to reduce to four cards. If he chose to keep the ace of clubs, the queen-ten of heart and the king of spades, East could easily defend by blanking his own ace of spades and keeping two clubs and the ace of hearts. Declarer would not have a heart left in dummy to lead and would, therefore have to choose between a club and a spade, and in either of these cases East could, of course, build a club trick for his fifth and setting trick. Nor would it avail declarer to use only six of dummy's diamonds since, in that case, he would have to do the impossible of building three tricks in his own hand. He would have one less card to discard to establish a spade trick, but would never be able to make a trick in hearts or more than the ace of clubs.

This hand is an excellent example of the steps to be taken by a defender in maintaining his positional advantage over the declarer. Quite obviously, in this hand, as in all hands of its type, East would have to follow the declarer's discards with an eagle eye in order to guage the cards that he himself should keep.

Today is experts' day in Ely Culbertson's column. Write your bridge comments, suggestions, and interesting hands to him, care of The Washington Post. For questions, remember to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Waterfront of Le Havre Still as 3,000 Strike

Le Havre, France, Aug. 31 (AP).—The entire waterfront at this seaport was tied up tonight with 3,000 seamen striking in sympathy for one crew which had demanded better quarters.

The crew of the French liner Champlain, sailors aboard seven freighters, and all tugmen in the harbor quit work while 2,000 dock workers threatened to join the walkout tomorrow. The strike movement was started after the crew of the small freighter Katiola, owned by the Chargeur Reunies, demanded two more washrooms.

War Flier, 2 Others Die in Plane Crash

North Belmore, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Lieut. Jack Bishop, World War flier of the Canadian Air Corps, and two companions were killed today when the airplane Bishop was flying crashed near East Meadow, Long Island.

The other victims were Roy Anderson, 21, a student pilot, of New York, and Roy White, a mechanic.

Bishop, who held an honorary commission in the Nassau County police, operated a private air service at Roosevelt Field with Miss Annette Gipson, who is competing in the Ruth Chatterton Air Derby to California.

Witnesses said the plane, which was fitted with dual controls for instruction, went into a left spin close to the ground.

Cubs Win, 1-0, Over Giants In Duel

Warneke Gives 6 Hits, Fans 7; One Man Reaches Third.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Lon Warneke hurled the Chicago Cubs back into the thick of the National League pennant race today as they turned on the pace-setting New York Giants for a 1-to-0 decision after dropping a double-header yesterday.

The victory still left the Cubs in third place, but only four games back of the Giants while reducing the league-leaders' margin over the idle second-place Cardinals to three and a half games.

In turning in his thirteenth victory of the year and his second over Bill Terry's men, Warneke limited the Giants to six hits, all singles and scattered over as many innings. He also fanned seven.

Despite Warneke's fine pitching the Cubs had a hard time winning before the season's largest Monday crowd of 15,164. Frank Gabler, seeking his fifth straight victory, and Clydell Castleman were touched for 12 blows, 3 of them for extra bases, but the league champions got nowhere with men on the sacks except in the sixth inning.

Allen Triples.

Ethan Allen led off the sixth with a triple. After Phil Cavarretta had sent a short fly to Joe Moore, Billy Herman crashed through with one of his four consecutive singles to send home the only run of the game.

After Castleman had relieved Gabler at the start of the eighth, the Cubs loaded the bases on three successive singles with two out, but Augie Galan was unable to get the ball out of the infield.

Only one Giant passed first base, Travis Jackson reaching third after opening the fifth with a single. He was safe at second when Bill Jurges dropped Cavarretta's perfect throw on Gus Mancuso's bunt and moved up when Dick Bartell forced the New York catcher. Warneke fanned Gabler, however, and then forced Moore to fly out to end the inning.

After going hitless in his first three trips to the plate, Jim Ripple, the Giants' alternating center fielder, singled with two out in the ninth to extend his hitting streak to 18 straight games.

Joyce Wethered, Golf Star, to Wed

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 31.—The engagement of Joyce Wethered, who is regarded as the greatest woman golfer in Great Britain, and Capt. Sir John Heathcoat-Amory will be announced Tuesday.

Miss Wethered, 34, is regarded as an outstanding golf stylist, ranking among the women players as Bobby Jones did among the men during his competitive career. Four times winner of the British women's championship, she retired from amateur competition in 1933 to become a "business woman" golfer and last year made a successful professional tour of the United States.

In 1931 she announced her engagement to C. K. Hutchison, Scottish international golfer, but it was later broken.

Sir John, 42, served in the World War and is chairman of John Heathcoat & Co. He plays golf, too, but not the tournament kind.

Miss Wethered is a sister of Roger Wethered, who won the British amateur championship in 1923. Among her famous golfing feats was a 4-to-3 victory over Roger in an exhibition match.

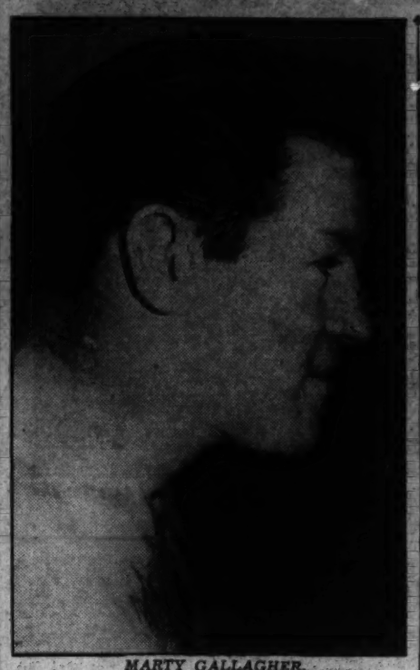
Gallagher Slight Favorite Over Levinsky In Bitter Battle Expected Here Tonight



MARTY GALLAGHER.

5,000 to Watch Heavyweights; Rivals in Best Condition.

By Bill McCormick.

Washington's bitterest boxing rivalry will be settled tonight at Griffith Stadium when local Marty Gallagher and Chicago King Levinsky clash in an interest-provoking heavyweight contest.

The bout is scheduled for ten rounds. Advance ticket sales indicate that a crowd in excess of 5,000 will contribute more than $8,000 to the box office.

Because he won a decision in their last meeting, held here last October, Gallagher rules a 5-to-7 favorite in the wagering. Because the decision was greatly disputed in many quarters there is plenty of Levinsky money to cover all who think Marty will win—and it is possible that the gladiators will enter the ring with even money prevailing.

Expect Bitter Battle.

Close observers of affairs fistic believe the return bout will be even more bitterly contested and exciting than their previous fight, which set a new high for thrills in Washington rings.

This belief is based on the fact

Broaca Yields Four Swats; Yanks Win

Seeds and DiMaggio Hit Hard as New Yorkers Trim Chicago, 5-1.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—With Bob Seeds and Joe DiMaggio providing the offensive power and Johnny Broaca pitching four-hit ball, the New York Yankees ran their winning streak to seven straight games today as they defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1, in the only game played in the American League.

The league leaders presented a make-shift infield, but had little difficulty stretching their margin over the second-place Indians to 16½ games. Seeds, a newcomer to the Yankees, pounded out two home runs, one in each of the second and eighth innings to account for three of the tallies, while DiMaggio's twenty-fifth circuit blow of the season sent in the first two runs in the opening frame.

Broaca chalked up his eleventh victory of the season and his fourth in a row. He yielded two hits in the second, when singles by Appling and Hayes and Shea's fly gave the Sox their only run, and was touched for the other two blows in the fifth.

The victory marked the sixth straight time the Yanks have beaten the Sox and gave them a 13-to-7 edge for the season.

Giants Buy Player From Yank Farm

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The New York Giants, leading the National League pennant race, went to their prospective World Series opponents for aid today when they purchased First Baseman John J. McCarthy from the Newark Bears, the International League farm of the pace-setting Yankees of the American circuit.

McCarthy, who will report at the end of the International League's play-off series starting next week, is expected to bolster the Giants' crippled first-base staff of Manager Bill Terry and Sam Leslie. He will be eligible for the World Series as the deadline is midnight tonight.

A member of the Brooklyn Dodgers at the start of the season, McCarthy went to Newark in the trade that sent Buddy Hassett to the major league club. He is batting close to .270.

Navy Coaches Plan To Use Heavy Men As Backs This Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 31.—For the first time in its football history, the Naval Academy squad has enough brawn to reserve a batch of big fellows, five in all, for the backfield group. Heretofore, with few exceptions, the 190 pounders and up, have been used exclusively as linemen.

Four of the five big backs are recruits from the plebe squad of last year, Bob Antrim, on the varsity squad for his second season, being the exception. Antrim, weighing a little over 190 pounds, is a fine carrier and passer, as well as defensive player, and has a good chance for the first string this season.

Jim Dean and Harold Hanson played in the plebe backfield last season, while Art Franks and Lou Burke are converted linemen, the former a tackle and the latter an end.

Rookies in Line-up, Nats Meet St. Louis

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

With the help of the White Sox, who absorbed a beating from the Yankees, the idle Nats yesterday performed the trcik of moving to within a half-game of the first division without moving a muscle.

But today they will attempt the noble experiment of a pair of rookies in the line-up as they continue their first-division drive with an eye to 1936.

When Earl Whitehill ascends the pitching mound this afternoon to fling his first offering at the Browns, he will have among his supporting cast Freddie Sington and Johnny Mihalic, late of the Nats' Chattanooga farm.

Out in rightfield Sington will be getting his second trial with the Nats. He was released in midseason last year when he failed to produce the hitting that won him the International League batting title with Albany in 1934, but his .390 average this season with Chattanooga, where he led all the league hitters, has intrigued Manager Bucky Harris all over again.

Reynolds Benched.

Sington's arrival means the benching of Carl Reynolds, who has been occupying the right-field post. No finished fielder, as is Reynolds, Sington's potentialities as a slugger have earned him a second trial.

But it is in Mihalic that Harris is placing his greatest faith. With Buddy Myer's baseball future clouded by his season-long illness, Harris in his moments of profound hope permits himself to toy with the belief that Mihalic will find a regular place in the Nats' infield.

Mihalic will be at second base today, the position at which he has been starring for three years at Chattanooga. During his brief tryout in the waning weeks of last season, Mihalic was assigned to shortstop by thhe Nats and created a deep impression with his work at that job.

There was no place at second base for Mihalic, what with Myer starring with the Nts, but the olive-skinned Chattanoogan is now very much in the running for the second-base job. No fault has ever been found with his fielding, and there is the little matter of a .320 batting average in the Southern Association that Harris has found quite fascinating.

Escobar Wins Undisputed Ring Battle

By the United Press.

Dyckman Oval, New York, Aug. 31.—Sixto Escobar, little brown man from Puerto Rico, extended his realm as bantamweight champion to the world tonight when he scored a technical knockout over Tony Marino, Pittsburgh, in the thirteenth round of a scheduled 15-round bout.

Escobar weighed 117½, Marino 115¼.

Cut Open in Seventh.

Escobar, who had been recognized as bantamweight champion by the New York commission and several other States, opened the cut over Marino's eye with a flurry of punches in the seventh round. It bled almost continuously from then until the fight was halted.

Marino's seconds were unable to stop the wound from bleeding, and several times sent the Pittsburgher out of his corner with blood dropping from the cut.

Escobar's triumph tonight established him as the first undisputed champion the 118-pound division has had since Charley (Phil) Rosenberg reigned over the division more than ten years ago. Marino, who came into the ring tonight as challenger, held a 14-round knockout over Balthazar Sangchili, the little Spaniard who was recognized as champion of Europe and had some claim to the world title by virtue of a triumph over Panama Al Brown.

Year in Jail, $1,000 Fine Is Penalty

Those guilty of offering a bribe to Frankie Blair, Camden, N. J., welterweight, to lose a bout here will be facing a fine of $1,000 or one year's imprisonment—or both—if found guilty, it was learned by The Post yesterday from Acting Chairman Kenneth Parkinson of the Boxing Commission.

"We will invoke the full authority granted us by Congress," Parkinson told a Post reporter. "That authority gives us the power to fine to the extent of $1,000 or impose a jail sentence of one year—or both. That is what we will do to the party guilty of trying to bribe Blair, if the Camden boxer can substantiate his charges."

Blair has been notified to report to the commission this week, for a meeting to be held in private. At the meeting will be all parties named in Blair's charges, which are to the effect that he was offered $1,000 to lose a fight to Cary Wright, local welterweight, last summer.

Meeting in Private.

"We are holding the meeting in private because we intend to formulate charges for criminal prosecution," Parkinson said last night. "Under the circumstances, because we intend to develop charges which will result in someone being fined heavily or sent to jail, we feel we should conduct our preliminary investigation just as is the case in courts of law when suspects are held for investigation."

It was learned from Parkinson that the charges are being investigated by several agencies that ordinarily do not co-operate with the boxing commission.

"We want all the dope, and want it authentically," Parkinson said in discussing plans for gathering all information pertinent to the charges. "You may rest assured that when the meeting finally is called to determine our course of action we will have all the data—and the right data."

The commission refused to reveal yesterday whether it intended to call upon the Metropolitan Police Department's detective force for assistance or whether it was intended to hire private detectives for the investigation.

Ubl, Gopher Grid Star, To Marry Next Month

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Myron Ubl, former Minnesota and Drake University football star, and Miss Carolyn Olson, the nurse who helped pull him through a critical illness four years ago, will be married some time in September, it was revealed today.

The announcement was made when Miss Olson resigned her position as a stewardess for the United Air Lines. The romance started in 1932 after Ubl suffered a fractured sternum in practice with the Minnesota squad. Pneumonia developed and during a long, near-fatal siege, Miss Olson attended him. After his recovery, Ubl, a star back, went to Drake where he was a regular on the gridiron eleven last fall.

Universal Basketball Team Beats Oilers

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Universal Pictures team from Hollywood defeated the National A. A. U. champion McPherson (Kans.) Oilers tonight, 35-30, in the "rubber" game between the two divisions of the United States champion Olympic basketball squad.

A crowd of 4,000 saw the first basketball in the Hippodrome, where a winter schedule of college double-headers will be played.

Fellows Resigns From Navy; Won '35 Athletic Sword

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 31.—Carl M. Fellows, captain of the Naval Academy basketball team last season and winner of the Navy Athletic Association sword as its leading all-around athlete of the year, resigned from the Navy today, having failed to pass his final physical examination on account of eye trouble developed since he became a midshipman.

Fellows graduated with his class on June 5, last year, but his commission was withheld pending the result of the physical examination, unable to pass this test, he resigned today. Fellows, whose home is Fitchburg, Mass., was a guard on the basketball team, a football back and played on the defense on the lacrosse team. He is considering several offers of employment.

Budge, Mako Take U. S. Doubles

Defeat Allison, Van Ryn, 6–4, 6–2 and 6–4 to Dethrone Veterans.

Mrs. Fabyan, Teamed With Mrs. Van Ryn, Wins in Upset.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 31 (AP).—A tennis earthquake struck Longwood today, toppling three pairs of defending champions from their national doubles thrones, including the world-famous Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn and Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan.

Allison and Van Ryn, an outstanding doubles team since 1928, lost their crowns when they bowed to the U. S. Davis Cup team, Don Budge and Gene Mako, for the eleventh time this season, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4. Miss Jacobs, national and Wimbledon Singles queen, and Mrs. Famyan, the U. S. Wightman Cup team star, were able to go into overtime before surrendering to Mrs. Van Ryn, wife of the unsuccessful finalist in the men's division, and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, 9—7, 2—6, 6—4.

The other pair of champions to suffer setbacks were Raymond Bidwell and Richard Bishop, of Boston, who lost their veteran's doubles titles to William J. Clothier, of Philadelphia, the 1906 national singles titlist, and Dwight F. Davis, of Washington, donor of the famous international court trophy, by margins of 4—6, 6—4, 10—8. The vanquished had a 4—1 lead in the final set, but were unable to maintain it.

In the fourth of today's final matches, Alice Marble and Mako gained the mixed doubles titles from Mrs. Fabyan and Budge, 6—3, 6—2. Mrs. Fabyan won here last year

Young Texans Shoot 69 at Pine Valley

By the Associated Press.

Clementon, N. J., Aug. 31.—Two young Texans, Ed White, of Austin, and Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, blasted their way into Walker Cup prominence today by beating par on the "heart-breaking" Pine Valley course for the first time as the American team staged a Scotch foursomes practice session.

White and Smith put together a round of 69, one below the even-par course record of George Rolan, former Texas amateur champion, which has stood for 14 years.

In practice this week two of the American players, Capt. Francis Ouimet and George Dunlap, have equaled the competitive record.

Playing perfect golf from tee to green, the Texans were out in par 35 and back in 34, one under. That feat virtually clinched their selection as one of the teams for Wednesday's Scotch foursomes, which open the two-day battle against the British team, although Ouimet does not expect to announce his choices until tomorrow afternoon.

Most of the American teams turned in good scores today while their British rivals kept their figures to themselves. It was learned that G. Alec Hill and Cecil Ewing carded 37—37—74 to beat J. Morton Dykes and Gordon Peters, 2 and 1. The latter pair had 38-38—76. Dr. William Tweddell, the British captain, and Jock McLean had a 77 as they beat the young southpaw, Percy B. Lucas, and Ted Turner, the Pine Valley pro who is trying to straighten out Lucas' game, one up.

Albert (Scotty) Campbell, of Seattle, and Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, beat Walter Emery, Oklahoma City, and Charley Yates, Atlanta, one up. Each team had a 74.

Helen Dettweiler Scores 80 at Rye

Rye, N. H., Aug. 31 (AP).—Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C. golf star, shot an 80 today to qualify easily for match play in the Eastern Women's Open golf championship, which saw Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, of Texas, shoot a 73 to win the medal and break the women's competitive course record.

Man Bites Dog in Mich.

Mount Clemens, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP). Harry (Tiny) Wright, center on the University of Michigan's 1935 football team, and captain-elect of the wrestling squad, said tonight that because of financial reasons he would not return to the university until February.

Perry, Jacobs Face Tasks In Singles

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—If Fred Perry, of England, and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., are to fulfill the experts' predictions that they will win the United States men's and women's singles tennis titles, they will have to do it the hard way.

Both Perry, who won the title in 1933-34 and is striving to become the first foreigner to capture it three times, and Miss Jacobs landed in the more difficult brackets today as the United States Lawn Tennis Association completed the draw for the tournaments which start Thursday at Forest Hills, Long Island. Eighty-nine entries were accepted for the men's championship and 64 for the women's.

Donald Budge, seeded No. 1 on the American list in the absence of the entry of Wilmer Allison, who has been compelled to forego defense of the title due to a back injury, appeared to have an easier path to the final than Perry.

Hunt to Compete.

Washington is represented by the largest contingent to crash the Nationals in years. Gilbert Hunt, jr., 19-year-old Middle Atlantic champion; Barney Welsh, District champion, and Hugh Lynch, prominent high-ranking player of the District, will compete in the men's tournament.

Of the three, Welsh drew the toughest opponent, his friend, J. Gilbert Hall, of New York. Hunt will meet Milton Reuhl, of Milwaukee, in another first-round match, while Lynch drew young Charlie Mattman, of Forest Hills, Long Island. Mattman, incidentally, is a former doubles partner of Hunt and shared the National Junior indoor doubles championship with the Washington boy in 1935.

Frank Goeltz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., a frequent competitor in Washintgon tournaments, will meet Huntington Hartford, of Newport, in the first round.

In the women's tournament, Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, holder of the District championship, will play Helen Fulton, young sensation from Winnetka, Ill. Edith Moore, of Montclair, N. J., winner of the Army and Navy Country Club tournament last year will meet Milicent Hirsh, of New York, in her first match.

Perry in Upper Half.

Perry, who lost the title a year ago in the semifinal round when he fell and was injured in the first set of his match with Allison, is grouped in the upper half with Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta; Ernie Sutter, New Orleans intercollegiate king; Jacques Brugnon and Pierre Pelizza, of France; Sidney Wood, of New York, and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles.

The red headed, skyscraping Budge, generally conceded the best chance of stopping Perry, was drawn in the lower half which in-

Detroit Lions Favored in Battle

Smith and Berwanger Hold Bulk of Fans' Attention.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Chosen by the fans of the Nation, the greatest group of college all-star football players ever assembled battle the Detroit Lions, professional champions, at Soldier Field tomorrow night before a prospective crowd of 80,000 spectators.

The contest, third in the series of the gridiron "dream games," will be the curtain raiser of the 1936 season.

The collegians, 31 of them, led by the sensational Riley Smith, Alabama quarterback, will attempt to accomplish what two other squads failed to do—beat the professionals and throw light on the question "can a good college team beat a good professional team?"

"Tuffy" Leemans, George Washington University star who has attracted the experts' fancy in practice, and Paul Tangora, another District boy who won his spurs at Northwestern, will appear in the collegians' line-up. Tangora will be on the starting team and Leemans is expected to be among the first of the reserves entering the game.

Lions Favored.

The Lions remain favored to triumph because of the experience gained by playing together and winning the National League championship. But, the Chicago Bears, the professional representatives in the previous two games, never scored a touchdown on the collegians. The first game was a scoreless tie. Last year, the Bears won, 5 to 0, because of the accuracy of Jack Manders' toe in kicking a field goal.

Tomorrow night's contest promises to be the most spectacular of the three All-Star games, with relief from the touchdown shortage. In the first two games the pro eleven, because of its style of play, was severely handicaped by being forced to adopt the college pass rule. This rule will work no hardship on the Lions as most of their passes are thrown from sweeps and reverses, 5 or more yards back of the scrimmage line.

The College line-up will cause Head Coach Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, no worries, for it has been selected for him by popular vote. He will have Keith Topping, of Stanford, and Wayne Millner, of Notre Dame, at ends; Truman Spain, of Southern Methodist, and Dick Smith, of Minnesota, at tackles; Vernon Oech, of Minnesota, and Paul Tangora, of Northwestern, at guards, and Gomer Jones, of Ohio State, at center. The quarterback will be All-America Riley Smith, with Sheldon Beise, of Minnesota, at fullback and another All-American, Jay Berwanger, of Chicago, and Notre Dame's Bill Shakespeare at the halves.

Obligation Ends.

With the opening kickoff, however, Bierman's obligation to the fans' poll will be ended, and he can shoot in replacements as he sees fit. Therefore, the spectators will likely see plenty of Butch Loebs, of Purdue; Joe Stydahar, of West Virginia; Bob Reynolds, of Stanford; Dan Fortmann, of Colgate; Dick Crayne, of Iowa; Tuffy Leemons, of George Washington; Glen Seidel, of Minnesota; Bobby Wilson, of Southern Methodist, and Darrell Lester, of Texas Christian, among others.

The man who carries the ball receives the greatest attention from the crowd, and Berwanger, one of the greatest of Chicago's long list of notable stars, is expected to supply many thrills with his marvelous running and passing ability.

The Lions will have a weight advantage of nearly 10 pounds a man. If the collegians expect to

Daily Double On 1st and 3d Races

Horses and Jockeys Are Plentiful; Sprinters in Feature Event.

By Walter Haight.

Today's the day at Marlboro. The little Prince Georges County oval, dormant 51 weeks out of the year, makes its annual bid as a turf center starting this afternoon. From 2 p. m., when a field of 2-year-olds are scheduled to arrive at the post, until sundown on Saturday, the mutuel machines will click, the horses will go round and round and there will be winners and losers.

Although there hasn't been any drastic change in Marlboro, the action there will be as conclusive as that at Saratoga or Narragansett. With Joseph Boyle, Edward Brennan and Co. in charge, the racing will be in good hands. Some 250 horses are in the stalls with a like number within vanning distance. The horses include the 70 winners at Cumberland. Jockeys are also plentiful.

Led by Sammy Palumbo, the half-mile and Charles Town champion, the riders include, Eddie Smith, the Washington boy, Cecil Coffman, Butsy Hernandez, Johnny Shanks, Leon Garrett, Frankie Cusimano, another District lad; Al Tryon and others. Not a Sonny Workman or an Earl Sande in the crowd, but hard riders all.

Well-balanced Fields.

Racing Secretary Brennan appears to have had no trouble in lining up the opening-day program. With fields limited to eight due to the narrow track and sharp turns, the entries reveal an overflow in every race. The program is well rounded. Opening with the usual juvenile dash, three sprints of 6½ furlongs, one of 5½ furlongs and two contests at a mile and a sixteenth are offered.

The fourth race is the day's outstanding event. Competing for a purse of $400 at 5½ furlongs will be a worthy field including Skyride, Chief Hollis, Jakovia, Doeskin, Hogarty, Flosilda and others. Weights have been distributed in a fashion that points to a thrilling battle.

Marlboro officals expect a profitable meeting. Betting at Cumberland's ten-day session, which closed Saturday, totaled $712,371, a record for that plant.

Less than 20 miles from the District line, via the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, Marlboro annually depends on Washington for the majority of its customers.

The daily double again will be a betting feature. The popuplar twin wager will be conducted on the first and third races.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY SARA, $8.00, $3.40, $2.80; KENYON C., $3.10, $2.90; ABBOTS HOUR, $10.10.

LADY SARA, kept within striking distance of the early leaders, moved up stoutly on the outside, wore down ABBOTS HOUR for the lead inside passing the furlong pole and, hard ridden, held KENYON C. safe. The leader, away quickly but lacking speed to keep up, held to a position in the outside and closed going stoutly in the stretch run. ABBOTS HOUR displayed speed from the start, was much used in disposing of ZACA and had nothing left when challenged by the first two. CAREFUL MISS was prominently placed all the way and had no excuses. EXHIBITOR was going gamely at the close. TINDERBOX was unable to enter into serious contention. ZACA showed early speed in disputing the lead, weakening badly in the last furlong. TWIT never was a factor.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:59. Winner, Capt. F. Eaton's ch. g. (9), by John P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUILDER, $6.40, $3.40, $2.80; NARISE, $3.70, $3.10; DIRIGIBLE, $5.40.

GUILDER had speed from the start, shook off CLASP before leaving the backstretch, drew clear, went wide into the stretch and, hard ridden at the end, just lasted to hold NARISE safe. The latter worked her way up steadily, came through on the inside of the winner at the stretch turn and closed with good energy, just failing to be along in time. DIRIGIBLE improved his position steadily and finished with good courage. CHOICE GOODS, in close quarters soon after the start, had to be eased back. He closed a good gap when gaining clear sailing. ZULU LAD, well up from the start, weakened in the last quarter mile. KRONA made up some ground. UNLAWFUL was never prominent. CLASP had keen early speed, faltering badly in the last 3 furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100. The Duxbury. For 2-year-olds. Start, good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:36½. Winner, Dixiana's br. f. (2), by Bulldog—Mary V. Trained by C. Vandusen. Value to winner, $825; second, $165; third, $75; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOOF, $4.40, $3.00, $2.70; TRINA, $5.90, $4.50; MISAPPREHENSION, $4.80.

WOOF, away fast, drew clear in the first quarter mile, was rated along in front and increased her lead steadily through the stretch. TRINA, away slowly and badly outpaced until rounding the far turn, came willingly on the outside, getting up in the stretch run to take the place. MISAPPREHENSION, in nearest chase of the leader for most of the way, held on well and just lost the place in the closing stride. PRINCE SADOR closed a good gap. DURWRACK, well placed while under stout handling, was unable to improve his position when called upon. BARON LYNN faltered in the stretch drive. STORY TIME weakened after going a half mile.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:06. Winner, O. H. Rowe's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLESSED EVENT, $16.10, $7.40, $5.30; FLYING DERE, $6.60, $4.30; BEAVER LAKE, $6.50.

BLESSED EVENT drew clear straightening out on the backstretch, increased his advantage after swinging around the far turn, opened up a commanding advantage and was never threatened. FLYING DERE moved up on the inside rounding the first turn, chased in closest pursuit of the leader and held on stubbornly to the end. BEAVER LAKE restrained early, moved up leaving the backstretch and closed willingly. HYMARQUE was well placed for the first half mile, was unable to keep up in the last 2 furlongs. ROYAL GOLD was unable to reach the leaders. BUSTER BOY was outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WAGON, $12.80, $7.50, $4.90; TWO BOB, $20.30, $9.20; VOTE BOY, $4.90.

RED WAGON took command in the first few strides, opened up a daylight advantage before the first quarter mile had been covered and, hard ridden through the last furlong, just held on long enough. TWO BOB, badly outpaced for the first half mile, moved up on the inside thereafter and, closing with a rush, was going fastest of all at the end. VOTE BOY, in nearest pursuit of the winner most of the way, was hard ridden and just lasted to save third from PICKLE CHANCE. The latter, away early, closed with good energy. CHANCING, outpaced early, closed some ground in the stretch. BOSTON BROOK loomed up threatening on the inside at the furlong pole only to drop back steadily thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:11½. Winner, Mrs. P. C. Dunn's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRETE, $5.85, $4.10, $3.10; BEVEAU, $6.90, $5.00; TUTTICURIO, $5.20.

CRETE was not hurried during the first half mile, moved up with a rush after leaving the stretch, responded gamely to urging in the stretch and was along in the last few strides. BEVEAU, outpaced early, closed with good energy on the outside through the stretch. TUTTICURIO outran the field to the first turn, was steadied along in front under slight restraint, withstood determined early opposition from JOHN WERRING, holding on gamely, but was unable to withstand the closing strides of the first two. ROCK POINT gained a contending position in the run down the stretch though unable to threaten when placed under punishment. HARDWARE moved up in threatening fashion approaching the far turn, but was unable to make up any ground. JOHN WERRING faltered badly after reaching the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Wen to post at 5:41. Off at 5:43½. Winner, W. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE ALONG, $15.00, $5.50, $3.50; SAND BABY, $2.80, $2.30; LONE HAND, $2.70.

IDLE ALONG went to the front immediately the start came, drew away into a good lead, met determined opposition from SAND BABY in the stretch and drew out after carrying the latter out in the last furlong. SAND BABY was rated along back of the pace, moved up stoutly when called upon in the stretch, was carried out and finished gamely in the last sixteenth. A claim of foul was disallowed. LONE HAND, unable to keep up early, closed some ground in the last quarter mile. MAR PAL, hard ridden while forcing the early pace, faltered in the last 3 furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:16. Winner, Almont Stable's b. f. (3), by Tokio—Gaffney Girl. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BULLFINCH, $8.10, $3.90, $2.90; GLITTER GLOW, $4.30, $3.60; BAY BUDDY, $4.20.

BULLFINCH, restrained early, moved up on the outside and fought it out desperately, getting up in the closing stride. GLITTER GLOW had good speed and fought it out in determined fashion, just failing to last long enough. BAY BUDDY, on the outside to gain a prominent position, was forced back nearing the far turn and, though closing willingly, was unable to endanger the first two. SECRET VOTE closed a good gap. SILVERY WAY was unable to reach the leaders after racing well placed early. MATCH PLAY tired after forcing the early pace.

Narragansett Feature to Red Wagon

Plater Wins Second Race in Three Days; Two Bob Head Behind.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 31.—Mrs. A. M. Creech's Red Wagon proved a durable sort of plater when he won his second start in three days, taking the fifth race here today by a head from C. V. Whitney's Two Bob. This was a 6-furlong test.

Saturday he won a 6-furlong overnight handicap here. Carrying top weight of 113 pounds, Red Wagon went to the front early in today's race with the favored Dancing Doll closest in contention. Trailing these two were T. F. Swords' Vote Boy and W. A. Jones' Boston Brook.

Two Bob was last in the field of eight right up to the middle of the far turn. With everything else swinging wide, Charley Stevenson found plenty of room on the rail and crept right in there with his mount.

The Minneapolis star put together a 38 and 40 to outdistance her nearest rival, Mrs. Jack Hoblitzell, Parkersburg, W. Va., former West Virginia champion, by three strokes.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Washington, District, Maryland and Middle Atlantic titleholder, tied for fourth with Virginia Bascom, Worcester, Mass., at 85, two strokes behind Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse.

Central High Grid Squad Reports

Hale, hearty and sun-tanned after a summer in Texas, Hardy, Pearce, Central High's football coach, has returned to Washington and is calling out Central's 1936 grid forces for a session at 9 a. m. today. A squad of 60 or more players is expected to report at Central Stadium.

The leader of the interhigh champions is not particularly optimistic, however, concerning the prospects. He claims he lost too many lettermen. Such aces as Billy Richardson, Paul Whedon, Johnnie Jones, Vince Meenehan, Joe Moran and Charlie Kline left yawning vacancies in the Central line-up when they were graduated in June.

On the other hand, Coach Pearce, who turned out a championship team in his first year at the helm, has what many coaches would call a wealth of material available. In the line he has his All-High guard, Charlie Jones, as the keystone of his forward wall, and such huskies as Johnnie Swank, Hugh Cramer, Bill Mandes and the pass-snatching Sam Fox ready to step into regular berths.

Pearce's chief worries are centering on the backfield. Richardson, Jones and Moran, all regulars, left only Quarterback Billy Vermillion to carry on this year. Vermillion, brainy field general, and a first-class ball carrier, provides a worthy nucleus, but the remainder of the ball-carrying corps is something of a question.

Bill Wooten, the left-handed passer, appears in line for one assignment. Chunky Bernie Askin and fast-stepping Bill Ickes, are other candidates with an edge on the rest of the field. Coach Pearce's task is to uncover some able reserves as well as first-string material. It was his unlimited reserve sources last year which provided the basis for Central's sustained championship drive.

Little practice will take place today. The candidates will report and receive uniforms and the first real practice session will not be held until tomorrow. Today is the first day the coaches may practice under the new Board of Education regulations.

U. S. Junior Net Players Triumph

By the Associated Press.

Haverford, Pa., Aug. 31.—The United States, represented by three young Californians, won all three of today's matches in the international junior tennis exhibition tournament to defeat France, 5-2, at the Merion Cricket Club.

Joseph Hunt and Bobby Riggs, who yesterday bowed to the French players, scored impressive singles victories.

Hunt disposed of Bernard Destremau, French Davis Cup player, 6—3, 6—4. The cool 18-year-old Riggs beat Yvon Petra on the eighth match point, 2—6, 7—5, 9—7.

Riggs then teamed with Wayne Sabin to turn back Destremau and Pierre Pellizza, 9—7, 4—6, 6—4.

Doubles Crown Won by Mako And Budge

with Enrique Maier, of Spain. The other final matches on the national doubles tournament program were played last Friday, when Clothier, jr., and jr. won the father-son final and Choate School's Robert Low and Harry Daniels, both of New York, the national interscholastic titles.

Stars Defeated.

All of the Nation's major singles champions were members of losing teams, Allison, Miss Jacobs and Bidwell, who rules the veterans. Allison, who is still bothered by an early season injury that may require an operation, will not defend at Forest Hills later in the week.

He and Van Ryn were appearing in their sixth final match in seven years when Budge and Mako reversed the result of last year's doubles final. Before they came here, those two pairs had clashed 10 times this season and all of the victories, including four in Davis Cup test matches, went to today's winners.

Budge and Mako, a pair of brilliant and powerful California youngsters, concentrated the full fury of their vicious attack on Allison from start to finish, forcing the Austin, Tex., veteran into 38 errors during the 28-game match that was decided in about an hour. Their aggressive tactics enabled Allison, still the best volleyer in the game, to set the stage for 15 placement smashes, which gave him the earned point honors.

Makes 27 Errors.

Budge totaled 14 earned points and 27 errors, 19 nets, 6 outs and 2 double-faults. Mako's totals were 30 errors and 9 earned points, making the same number of nets, outs and placements as Van Ryn, who also had two double-faults against none for Mako.

Coach of Women Defends Brundage In Case of Holm

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—A spirited defense of Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, for dropping Eleanor Holm Jarrett from the Olympic swimming team was made tonight by Dee Boeckmann, of St. Louis, Mo., coach of America's successful women's track and field squad.

"In my opinion, Eleanor Holm had had sufficient warning before she was dropped from the team for drinking," Miss Boeckmann, a former Olympic track champion, said.

"Mr. Brundage acted wisely, especially for the protection of the youngsters aboard, some of them 13 and 14 years old."

Helen Stevens, of Fulton, Mo., record-breaker in the 100-meter run, said the majority of athletes received excellent treatment from the Olympic officials as well as and warm hospitality from the Germans.

"What's this talk about the athletes had a miserable time—and that Hitler snubbed everyone?" she asked.

Hagerty Sees Big Year for G. U. Eleven

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Fat and fresh, physically, and downright cocky, mentally, Jack Hagerty arrived in town yesterday afternoon and immediately set himself to the task of mapping Georgetown's 1936 football campaign, one that is expected to return the Hilltoppers to the heights they once attained in the grid world.

Sporting a chin and a half and looking better than he has at any time in the past two years, the youthful Georgetown mentor spoke confidently of his plans and hopes for the approaching season. So confident was he in fact, it will be weeks before the university seismograph is repaired.

Hagerty expects to have an undefeated team this year.

We were egging him on about his chances when he unloosed the thunderbolt that may cost him his membership in the Amalagamated Coaches Union. We thought we were mistaken, but no, we got it right the first time. He may have been joking, but he said it. That's our story and Hagerty's going to be stuck with it if his team doesn't back him up.

Confidence His Right.

Come to think of it, though, Jack may have some grounds for his confidence. His biggest problem lies in the punting department, left virtually unmanned by the departure of Joe Meglen. But heartening reports have been circulated concerning the foot feats of Frank Meglen's Joe's kid brother, Hank Gibbons, Bill Duff and Johnny Fleming. If any one comes through then Georgetown has better than an even chance of making good its coach's boast, and if Hagerty develops two or three dependable punters the opposition better start ducking. It is a well known fact that many of Georgetown's defeats in the past two years were directly attributable to faulty foot twork.

Georgetown's line, which will be intact, should be as rough and taugh as the tobacco-chewing forward walls Lou Little developed at the school in his hey-day. Al Snyder and Dave Noonan, ends; Clem Stralka, Cy Cummings and Al Vacarro; Johnny Frank, Turk Teehan and Lou Shuker, guards, and Reds Hardy, center, all regulars last season, are back and not at all certain of holding their jobs. On top of that there is a fine-looking bunch of freshmen coming up their year. Its enough to make any coach smile and go off on a tangent.

Work Begins Thursday.

Georgetown begins practice Thursday afternoon. Forty-three men—more talent than Hagerty has had at his command than at any time since he returned to his alma mater, have been invited to report. Hagerty thinks that he should be able to get a winning club out of this crowd, and he may be serious when he says his boys are going to win 'em all.

He can park out on the limb if he wants to, but as for me, just remember I said (early in the season) Georgetown will have a mighty fine club this year. It'll be one of the season's surprises.

Coleman, Morgan In Wrestle Feature

A wrestling David will lengage a mat Goliath at Griffith Stadium next Thursday night when 5-foot 2½-inch Abie Coleman bounces into action against Tex Morgan, 6-foot 3-inch, 240-pounder, in a 30-minute supporting bout to the Ole Anderson-Rudy Dusek engagement.

Coleman, the diminutive Jewish grappler, is at his best as a gaint killer. Morgan is so big he always he should be at no particular handi- is matched against smaller men, so cap against his dumpy opponent.

On the same card will be one Abe Yourist, a Jewish protege of Coleman's, who will make his debut gainst Floyd Marshall.

Feller Good, but Not in Class With Johnson, Says O'Leary

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The only man in baseball today who saw Walter Johnson's start in 1907 and also watched boyish Bob Feller make his major league debut a few days ago says Barney had a faster speed ball.

That man is Charley O'Leary, coach of the St. Louis Browns.

"There's been lots of talk about how fast this Feller is," O'Leary said, "and he is fast, perhaps the fastest pitcher in the league, but don't let anyone tell you he's as fast as Johnson."

O'Leary should know. As a Detroit player 29 years ago he saw Johnson pitch his initial game for Washington, and little more than a week ago he saw Feller, 17-year-old Cleveland rookie, humble St. Louis and strike out 15 men—within one of the league record—in his first full game.

"Of course," O'Leary added, "Johnson and Feller cannot be compared on any basis, save the impression they made in their first starts. I think Johnson had more smoke, but then, I didn't face Feller. It is absurd to even hope that Feller will be as good as Johnson. Old Barney was tops.

"Johnson had an edge on Feller in their starts because Walter was taller and broader and heavier, he was three years olde- and he had had more experience. When Feller grows up he may take on more speed.

"Both of them had little but a fast ball at the start. Bob has a fair curve now and Johnson developed more stuff. Both were cool but Barney had the better control.

"Feller looks to me like the best pitching prospect of the year and he has a great future ahead of him. I know he lost to Boston yesterday, but you noticed he struck out five men in five innings. That's going."

O'Leary doubts that Feller will better the league strike-our record of 16, even though he came within one of equalling it in his first game.

"He may, but the odds are against him," the veteran coach said. "It is likely he'll never come as close again as he did in that first game."

First Workout Today for Maryland

48 Men Will Report to Coach Dobson; Linemen to Get Attention.

Heralding the approach of autumn and the football season, a season of hot cakes and coffee, hot dogs and flasks, hot bands (and some not so hot) and overheated alumni, gay throngs of pretty girls and gay young blades, and $2.20 seats on the 20-yard line, the University of Maryland's 1936 football squad will be out in full force this morning at College Park for its first drill of the season.

Some 48 robust young men have been invited, nay ordered, to report to Head Coach Frank Dobson and his assistants promptly at 10 o'clock or risk the penalty of two extra laps around the expansive meadowland that is Maryland's practice field. Twenty-three of these are classified as experienced varsity men, 13 of whom were good enough to win letters last season. The remainder, naturally, are untried, but ambitious sophomores.

To Develop Linemen.

Two sessions a day are on the program until school opens and the best part of that time will be devoted to the development of linemen, with emphasis on guards and tackles. Men for these positions are as scarce as hairs on a certain boxing writer's head, but Dodson, a shrewd football physician, probably has a remedy for the ailment. If he has, Maryland is going places in the football world, and if he hasn't the Terps will be just average.

But, just as Maryland has more company, so too is it favorably situated regarding backfield talent. Barring wholesale injuries and complete reversals of form Maryland should have one of the best backfields in its recent history.

Backfield Is Back.

Maryland's 1935 backfield, headed by Bill Guckeyson, is back intact, along with Waverly Wheeler and Knocky Thomas, a couple of reserves who are handy to have around for emergencies. Together with Speed Coleman, Charles Ellinger and Johnny Gormley they should dispose of Dobson's backfield worries. If they fail there is always Jim (Tank) Meade, a burly oby who made life miserable for Maryland's freshman opponents last year. Of course he may not deliver for the varsity, but it wouldn't be wise to bet on that.

Dobson should be able to confine all his worrying to the line, where he really has something to think about. Maryland's front line stock is lower than Horse Car Amalgamated, and less potent. There are only a few boys back from last season and even fewer graduating from the freshmen. The line holds the key to Maryland's success. A good line means a good season. If it is mediocre the Terps will be the same, and if is shoddy then ten Guekeysons, Ellingers, Meades, Colemans and Gormleys can't make it a winning ball club.

Vic Willis and Blair Smith, ends; Turk Birkland, tackle; Mike Surbent, guard, and Frank DeArmye, center, are the only letter men returning. It is from the holdovers and green, untried talent coming up that Dobson must mold his new line. His prospects aren't too bright, but the lean Southerner is a cagey fellow and a good coach.

Grays Seek Games.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Mr. Charley Grimm's Chicago Cub athletes are now engaged in the grim business of hanging to the heels of the fast-flying Giants and the manner in which they have won two of their last three games from the Giants is very heartening, indeed, to Chicago fans. But unless Mr. Grimm's young men win the pennant or lose it by more than a one-game margin, then Mr. Grimm will stand accused of being an awful sucker.

POVICH.

Because in a sudden burst of magnanimity a few days ago, at a time when the Cubs were farther removed from the league lead, and slipping fast, Mr. Grimm pulled what is known to big league managers as an amateur trick that may have cost his ball club a precious game.

It was on the occasion of that riot game in St. Louis when the Cubs were engaged in battling the Cards that Mr. Grimm so far forgot himself as to plead with an umpire that Dizzy Dean be allowed to stay in the game. Dean, you remember, had been heckled so furiously from the Cubs' bench that he left the mound in the early innings, walked over to the Chicago dugout, singled out Tex Carleton as the chief culprit, and socked Mr. Carleton on the schnozzle.

Of course, Mr. Carlton socked back and the fighting became very general, whereupon the umpire-in-chief thumbed both Mr. Dean and Mr. Carlton off the premises and the Cardinals started to warm up a new pitcher.

Whereat Mr. Grimm, to the great surprise of the Cardinals, who were entitled to regard him as somewhat daft, beseeched the umpire to permit Mr. Dean to remain in the game. Grimm's request was granted, Dean was thumbed back to the mound, the game was resumed, and Mr. Dean went on to beat the Cubs, 7 to 2, or something like that.

Ball players would have sworn they would never live to see it—a big league manager begging an umpire to let an opposing player stay in a game. Especially a star like Dizzy Dean whose presence might very probably mean defeat for the Cubs. It was a stunt that belonged to the sandlots and the college circuit and, as such, was a dumb trick on the part of Grimm, however sporting it may have been.

The Cubs were fighting for the pennant. The difference between losing that particular ball game may mean the difference between a $5,000 or $6,000 cut of the World Series for every member of the Cubs, and the $1,000 that each member of a second-place team draws. Grimm, perhaps, wasn't thinking of that, but he may have cause to at the end of the month.

If, perchance, it is a one-game margin by which the Giants beat the Cubs out of the pennant, then Mr. Grimm will be no less than a chump. To the guy's credit is the sporting spirit of his gesture in returning Dean to the game, but he had a duty to his ball players, his club owner and Chicago fans that he may have muffed unforgivably.

In Short——

The National Professional Football League was conceived in the mind of Dr. Harry A. March several years ago . . . when a postman delivered to Dr. March two tickets to the Army-Navy game of that year and bemoaned the fact that "there are no Sunday football games for guys like us who have to work on Saturday afternoons." . . . struck by the idea, Dr. March conferred with his good friend, Tim Mara, New York promoter, who immediately organized the National Professional League for Sunday games . . . until he makes good with the New York Giants, Tuffy Leemans will draw only $50 per game in the pro league . . . after that his salary may reach $400 per game if he is a big-shot star . . . Whereas college stars of a half-dozen years ago could hold out for bonuses for signing as pros, they are now glad to sign at the minimum contract . . . with Leemans out of college, Washington's new gridiron hero is destined to be Irish Carroll, the fancy-stepping Catholic U. halfback . . . the Van Ryns split a double-header in the national tennis doubles yesterday at Brookline . . . when John Van Ryn, paired with Wilmer Allison, was beaten in the finals, and his wife, paired with Carolin Babcock, dethroned Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey Fabyan in the women's finals . . . the longest-hitting ball players for their weight in the American League are Harlan Clift, of the Browns; Frankie Crosetti, of the Yankees, and Odell Hale, of the Indians, none of whom scale over 170 pounds.

6-4, for League Crown Pepco Defeats Peoples,

The Potomac Electric Power ball team had altogther too much power for Peoples Drug Stores yesterday and the Pepco club rode into The Post Association week-day playoffs and the National Capital League championship yesterday with a 6-to-4 victory.

A wave of 11 hits and a half-dozen Peoples Drug errors combined effectively to lift the Electric Power boys to the title. Pepco will play the champions of the Federal Double-A League in their first play-off series game next week.

Pepco has the hitting of Frank Cumberland to thank particularly for their championship. Shortstop Cumberland connected for three singles and a double to help account for five of the six Pepco runs.

On the other hand, Charlie Sullivan, of Peoples, came close to carrying the Druggers to victory single-handed, knocking in all four runs for his team.

Pepco took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Pete Chaconas drew a walk and scored on Smitty Neau's single over second. Peoples tied matters up in the second on a double by Thompson and a single by Sullivan but an error by Peoples, singles by Ault and Cumberland and a pass to Bailey gave Pepco a 3-1 lead in the fourth.

In the fifth, Chaconas took first on another Peoples error by Wiltshire and Nau, Deck and Cumberland singled in succession for 4-to-1. Deck hit a homer to deep right in the seventh for 5-to-1, but in the eighth, Peoples came back to within an ace of tying the count when Downs took first on an error by Bailey, Thompson singled and Sullivan cracked a circuit clout to centerfield for 5-4.

Pepco widened their lead in the ninth on singles by Ault and Cumberland and an error by Downs. Lefty Joe Sullivan, Pepco ace, had complete control of the situation in the last half of the ninth and Peoples failed to threaten. Thus, Pepco ascended to the title won last year by Acacia Insurance.

Garden City's Links Tough, Says Cox

Amateurs to Use Tricky Greens; 70 Was Broken There Only Once.

By Dave Herman.

Garden City (N. Y.) golf course, where the National Amateur Championship will be played the week of September 14, is a trying, nerve-testing layout, in the opinion of Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, who yesterday devoted several hours to a general inspection and tour of this historic links.

Cox, who spent a few days in his native heath, Brooklyn, before embarking last night for Hershey, Pa., to prepare for the $5,000 Hershey Open, reports that the course is very flat and requires straight hitting.

Eight Washington golfers will be among a field of some 200 who will get a taste of this par 73 layout in the all-match play championship.

Plenty of Traps.

"Those fairways are dotted with traps, and a player not only must place his shots from the tee, but concentrate on every shot at all times," declared the versatile Kenwood professor.

Continuing, Cox said:

"The fairways are very firm and in good shape. There is a watering system throughout the course.

"Bunkers—some of fine white sand, while others have coarse native sand.

"The rough grass will be rather long and thick, and there is plenty of bunched sea grass growing in fairway traps."

Cox says the greens are fast with tricky little rolls or undulations on the surface. Velvet bent grass spots prevail, but there are no brown patches or grain to annoy the players.

"Just picture the old type of putting surface with a mixture of grass," says Wiffy.

Mehlhorn Shot 69.

"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, according to Cox, is the only man who ever broke 70 at Garden City. He shot a 69, holing all putts.

The canny Cox secured the official yardage for each hole. When the boys open fire the course will stretch out 6,808 yards. There is only one par three on that first nine, and the par for that side will be 37.

Federal Olympic Control Is Urged

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 31.—John Reed Kilpatrick, president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, returned from a trip to the Olympic games as a spectator today and offered a suggestion that American participation should be controlled by the Federal Government.

Kilpatrick said he was not ready to advocate a Federal commissioner and strict nationalization, as in Germany, but he thought we should start planning for the 1940 games in Tokyo "immediately."

"It is time we ran our teams as a Federal proposition," he said. "We should select some one to devote all his time to the job and decide on our entries now and prepare to send them, and not wait until the last month to see if some Santa Claus will come through with enough to send our team."

Overlin, Tymosko Win.

Frank Tymosko, 193, Richmond, Va., defeated Joe Alois, 182, in six rounds.

Utah Copper Raises Wages Five Per Cent

Alabama Companies Grant Increases; Bonus by Westinghouse.

Bingham, Utah, Aug. 31 (AP).—A 5 per cent pay increase, affecting about 2,300 employes, was posted today by the Utah Copper Co., a subsidiary of Kennecott Copper Corporation.

At the same time it was disclosed the company's Arthur mill, some sections of which have been shut down about six years, will be put on an operating rate of one-third of capacity September 1. The mill's new schedule will entail employment of about 250 additional workers and will result in a rate of 60 per cent of capacity for all plants and mines of the Utah company.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 31 (AP).—Wage increases, effective Tuesday, September 1, were announced today by the Gulf States Paper Corporation and the Central Foundry Co. The paper concern, employing more than 750 persons, granted an increase of 5 per cent on wage rates of all hourly employes. Officials also announced that a bonus of 5 per cent would be paid by September 15 to all regular Tuscaloosa employes of the firm who have been on the pay roll for the entire quarter from June 1 to August 31, inclusive.

The Central Foundry Co. announced a wage increase of 5 cents an hour in one department, a 10 per cent increase for workers in two pipe departments and other adjustments in the scale.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 31 (AP).—Some 40,000 employes of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. received 14 per cent more than their regular wages today for the month of August under the company's excess earnings plan. The workers got an additional 13 per cent last month, and 9 per cent the month before.

The Westinghouse plan stipulates the employes get 1 per cent in addition to their regular wages for each $60,000 the company earns in excess of $600,000 a month.

$362,925,000 Issues Effective in July

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities with estimated gross proceeds of $362,925,000 became fully effective during July, 1936. This total compares with $323,439,000 for June, 1936 and $530,475,000 for July, 1935.

Utility companies were the largest registrants with 43.7 per cent of the month's total registrations, while financial and investment companies were second with 29.4 per cent of the dollar value of the month's aggregate. Manufacturing companies, which had been the largest registrants in each of the three previous months, were third in size, with registrations of 16.9 per cent of the total.

Curb Prices Firm; Oils, Mines Off

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Although a number of stocks in the curb market were unseated for fairly wide losses, the generally firm undertone remained intact today.

Group-wise, mining and oil shares closed lower. Sunshine Mining, however, moved against the trend for a gain of ¾ to 16¾ following publication of a favorable first-half earnings report. Pioneer Gold worked up ⅜ to 8¼. On the downside, Bunker Hill & Sullivan lost 1⅛ at 80; Aluminum Co. of America, 2 at 128, and American Cyanamid "B," ½ at 34. Humble oil dropped 1½ to 65 and Gulf eased ½ to 88. Creole Petroleum was soft at 22¾, and Sunray, International Petroleum and Pantepec finished steady.

Outstanding gainers included Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, up 1¼ to 91¼; Alabama Great Southern, up 1 to 60½, and Pittsburgh Lake Erie, up ¾ at 87¼. Activity tapered off somewhat with total transactions of 211,000 shares, compared to 287,000 Friday.

Stocks Maintain Firm Tone With Advancing Steel Shares; Wheat Declines.

New York, Aug. 31.—Dog days in the securities market ended about as they began, with small sales volume and narrow price changes. Bonds held firm, especially in the Treasury group. Stocks moved a little higher in most sections on a turnover that didn't go much beyond a million shares. Grains were mixed. There was a small loss in corn. September wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 109 cents a bushel. Cotton brought slightly higher prices.

After their unwonted activity one Saturday, the rails tied and backed and filled most of the day. Opening prices were fractionally higher, but few got anywhere. Central, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio and Pennsylvania moved within a half-point range in the early trading. Nickel Plate and the Alleghany preferreds rose 1 to 3 points. Union Pacific, ex dividend, lost a point.

While the rails failed to follow through, the steel shares again had a good session. As a group they moved into new high ground. Bethlehem and Crucible were favorites. Steel common sold at the price seen on this movement. Motor shares were firm, but failed to shine as market leaders. Public utilities were mixed.

Tractions Advance.

Mild play was had in the motor accessories. Metals were firm. Rail equipments were mixed. Oil shares had rather a poor day as Standard softened. Local tractions managed to come to life and spurted 1 to 3 points. Newcomers to the most active group of stocks included Interlake Iron and Vadsco Sales. Vadsco preferred rose 6 points. American Radiator came forward.

Money markets promise to show no disturbance over the month end money turnover. The holiday this year falls late enough to divide the strain a little, but in any case, the excess reserves still are too high for any tightening of money rates. Next month should see a turnover in money, mostly on Government account, including refunding, income taxes and corporate financing of around two billions.

In foreign exchanges business was slack. Gold continued to seep out of Paris, mostly from engagements made last week on the weak franc, but the rate was firmer today. Sterling changed little and the fate of the Spanish unit is unknown as, for that matter, is the future value of the Italian, German and even the French currency. Conceivably the dollar would be cut further, in case of devaluation of the franc, mark and other European currencies; but that possibility the markets for the most part pretend to ignore.

Debt Menace.

Week-end trade news was favorable enough, but month-end surveys of business, while recognizing the considerable rise in activity that has taken place this summer, put discussion of actual conditions into the background and concentrated on the chief menace of the future. The Guaranty Trust Co., for example, in its bulletin, notes lack of understanding by the public of the meaning of a rapidly rising public debt, of the threat to their jobs and living standards that it contains.

The most disquieting feature of the situation, the bank points out, is the continuance of the spending, which must be borne mostly by people of low incomes in long run. "The time has arrived," the survey concludes, "when it may be questioned whether expenditures by the Government to create employment ever accomplished the results it was contended they would have. * * * It is certain that the present fiscal policies of the Government threaten to create ultimately a situation in which the ability of business to give employment and to meet the pay rolls may be seriously impaired for years to come."

Currently the position looks strong on the surface. This week's steel industry operating rate, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, slipped a point to 71½ per cent of capacity, but that compares with 45.8 per cent a year ago and is still higher than a month ago. Meanwhile the talk of higher wages found a definite footing in action by a small steel company in lifting the hourly rate by 3 cents to above the general average.

Bearish.

"I cannot see how you can conscientiously write in an optimistic mood about the stock market," protests a reader, "if you take the salient facts into consideration. We have had the worst crop failure in the history of the country. We have a national debt, which you said recently in the Sun is forty billion. Ten million more people in the drought districts will have to go on relief this winter. Prices of foods will mount high and curtail buying of nonessentials. Three billions more for relief will have to be raised at the next session of Congress and new taxes levied. All optimistic statements being published by corporations and extra dividends are water through the mill. The stock market discounts the future. What kind of business will we have in the early part of 1937? Alfred P. Sloan sounds a note of alarm. He says: 'A grave future faces the country,' and he believes that a crisis will come in the early months of 1937."

Debt.

That commentator has put his finger on the sorest spot of the situation, namely, the tremendous debt, with the certainty of higher taxes. He is right in wondering how anybody can be optimistic of the future with such a burden in prospect, but on short term view the prospect for continued improvement is not so dark as it is on longer view. The debt pincers will be kept under control as long as possible. It might be only a few months and it might be a year or more before we are made to realize what a big debt means. Much depends on how soon the idiocy of piling up the debt stops.

Exaggeration.

As for the drought, its effects probably have been considerably exaggerated. It won't at all be necessary to add 10,000,000 people to the relief rolls because of it; but just the same it will be made the excuse for a huge increase in Government spending and the higher food prices that are certain over the next several months will, if they don't halt the business recovery, at least slacken the pace of improvement. The stock market plainly has for weeks been showing conservatism on the question whether progress in 1937 will be equal to that of 1936. Meanwhile, it can be asked whether after all the stock market penetrates very far into the future and so long as business is well maintained stock prices are unlikely to break badly.

Spending.

One reason for near term bullishness on stocks, particularly those of the consumption industries, is clearly set out in this excerpt from a stock exchange firm's market letter, that of Shields & Co.: "Gov. Landon's ideas on Government spending were praised and repeated, although the dominant market influence promises to be the fact that the people generally have started to follow the Government's example and in an increasing number of instances again have started living beyond their means. Automobile buying, retail sales of clothing, house furnishings, etc., and demand for luxuries well beyond that warranted at this season and promise steady increase during the fall and winter."

Local Banks Seek to Spur Housing Loans

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Beginning today, member banks of the District of Columbia Bankers Association are running a series of advertisements calling attention to the fact that the liberal provisions of the national housing act for securing loans to modernize homes and business properties are still available. The bankers' campaign, extending through September, is co-operative with the national campaign of the Federal Housing Administration.

The advertisements are intended to bring the public to realization of the value of such improvements to property at this season before winter makes them more difficult. Some discussion of the rate of interest permissible under the national housing act has brought forth the opinion of a majority of local bankers that they can, in the public interest, charge a lower rate and it is believed that this course will be followed by practically all banks.

Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald has announced that more than $23,000,000 of insured home mortgages have been sold to institutional purchasers of mortgage securities up to and including July 31. As of that date, he announced, 48 insurance companies had recorded transfer to themselves of approximately $12,000,000 in mortgages insured under title II of the national housing act, or more than half of the total purchased. National and savings banks and trust companies account for purchase of the balance.

STEWART McDONALD.

Money Flow Is More Free.

"These institutions," Mr. McDonald said, "have gone into markets beyond their own State boundaries for a great bulk of these insured mortgages, thereby contributing toward a freer flow of mortgage money from areas where it is abundant to areas where it is scarce.

"The standardization of the mortgage as an investment, a development effected by the Federal Housing Administration, has provided insurance companies and banks with a greater opportunity for investment in residential real estate mortgages. Heretofore large institutional investors in mortgages confined their operations to metropolitan areas where they maintained branch offices or loan correspondents for those territories. Investment in mortgages in widely scattered communities was not considered sound practice when investors were without facilities for servicing such loans in emergencies and where investors were unable to make regular inspection of the property against which the mortgage was made.

"The insurance feature of the national housing act has eliminated this danger and has made it possible for these investors to enter the field on a larger scale and expand their activities.

"The risk-rating system of measuring mortgage risk, created by the Federal Housing Administration's underwriting department, establishes the insured mortgage as an investment of standard quality and value."

Banking Notes.

Emerson, another partner, is also a member, and the firm is becoming a clearing member both of the Board of Trade and of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Trading Fluctuations Extended in Grain Pit.

Board of trade directors at a special meeting today increased the limits for daily price fluctuations on grain contracts calling for delivery in the current month. At present this ruling affects September deliveries on the exchange.

The limits of price fluctuations in wheat, corn, rye and barley were extended to 8 cents a bushel above or below the average closing prices of the preceding day, and in oats the limit was fixed at 6 cents.

The limits which have been in effect were 5 cents on wheat, rye and barley, 4 cents on corn and 3 cents on oats. These price "pegs" have been in effect since July 28, 1933, and will continue to apply on the deferred deliveries, which now are December and May.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Fisherman Dies Of Bullet Wound

Alfonso Brown, 30, of 1229 Madison street northwest, who was shot through the stomach by an unidentified person while fishing off Leonardtown, Md., August 23, died last night at Providence Hospital as a result of the wound.

Brown, who was accompanied on the fishing trip by Arthur Mohler, of 1368 C street southwest, was taken following the shooting to Leonardtown Hospital and transferred from there to the local hospital. Mohler provided the blood for several transfusions which were made in an effort to save Brown.

Sheriff J. B. Love, of Leonardtown, who has charge of the investigation of the shooting, inclines to the theory that Brown was hit by a stray bullet which was intended for seagulls.

Hull Demands Blame Be Fixed For Air Attack

ever, to Secretary Hull's statement that the ships were dispatched solely to aid in removing American nationals. The Secretary stressed the repeated warnings by the State Department of the dangers inherent in the civil strife, and noted that about 1,000 Americans thus far had left the country on American and foreign ships, with the remaining 500 consisting chiefly of those who had chosen to stay.

Americans still in Madrid were told also that the regular railroad route from there to the coast might be closed at any time, and that it might not be possible to keep the embassy open much longer.

To Take On Refugees.

The U. S. S. Quincy, a heavy cruiser, probably will reach Alicante, on the east Mediterranean coast, Thursday morning to take aboard refugees from Madrid. The Kane, on its way from Gibraltar to Bilbao, on the Bay of Biscay, proceeded on its course yesterday after the bombing incident. The Coast Guard cutter Cayuga took 27 Americans and 22 foreigners from Bilbao Sunday. The U. S. S. Hatfield, a destroyer, left Gibraltar yesterday for Barcelona, where it is scheduled to arrive September 2.

The Oklahoma, which left Gibraltar for Norfolk yesterday, will arrive about September 11.

The Spanish representations from both rebels and the Government at Madrid were awaited keenly here, as the Secretary's note, in forceful terms, sought immediate assurances that "another incident of this character" would be prevented.

Statement in Full.

Hull's statement of the coming withdrawal of American naval vessels follows in full:

"It may be said in the first place that these vessels were ordered to this locality solely for the purpose of aiding American nationals in Spain to evacuate, on account of danger arising from the civil strife in that country. About 1,000 Americans have been able thus far to evacuate, with the assistance of our American vessels and some foreign vessels. It is estimated that around 500 remain at present in Spain.

"As early as August 1, 1936, this Government through its Ambassador, its consuls and other representatives in Spain, earnestly urged all American nationals to evacuate at the earliest possible date, and since that time the representatives of our Government in Spain have repeatedly urged Americans thus to leave, giving among other reasons that the danger may increase and that in any event the existing facilities for evacuation could not be counted upon indefinitely. The latest of such earnest warnings was sent out from Madrid on the morning of Sunday, August 30.

"The chief portion of the 500 American nationals who remain in Spain continue there mainly on account of business or family connections. Both our official representatives in Spain and our American vessels have rendered splendid service in this work of evacuation. It is my judgment that within the next few days it will be possible to determine more definitely by what date this task of relief will, to every practical extent, be completed and the present systematic activities terminated."

Forecast of Reply.

Madrid (Tuesday), Sept. 1 (U.P.).—The Spanish government has not yet answered the United States' protest on the attempted bombing of the U. S. S. Kane in Spanish waters, but the United Press was informed authoritatively that the government's answer propbably would state:

That the attacking plane did not belong to the Madrid government.

That no government plane was in that area Sunday, when the attack took place.

2 Fighting to Save Son Seek Solitude

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—The parents who are risking death to produce a serum in their own blood to save the life of Philip Levitt, 7, tonight said they were weary of being considered heroes.

Mrs. Morris Levitt, Philip's mother, declared she and her husband were "worn out" by constant attention, and wished to be let alone in their hazardous experiment.

"We know everyone has meant well," she asserted, "but the telephone has been ringing almost constantly for days, and people come here and keep us awake both day and night. We would like everyone to forget about us, and just let the whole thing drop."

Mrs. Levitt said attempts to obtain blood for their son from recent victims of the virulent streptococci infection from which he is suffering had been abandoned.

Richman Flight Delayed.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Reports of bad weather over the Atlantic caused Dick Merrill and Harry Richman today to postpone again the take-off of their projected round-trip flight to London. Merrill said they hoped to get away tomorrow.

Rescued and Rescuers Talk It Over Afterward

Cave-in Victim, 10, Tells How It Feels To Be Buried Alive

Richard O'Neil, 10, sat swathed in a blanket on the front porch of his home in Alexandria last night and told what it feels like to be caught in a cave-in.

"Well, except for the time I couldn't breathe for a few minutes, it didn't hurt much," Richard said and smiled.

The youngster was buried beneath several tons of dirt yesterday afternoon when a cave he and his friends were digging collapsed.

He was rescued by his father, Owen O'Neil, railroad conductor, and by the fire rescue squad after nearly an hour beneath the earth.

"But it was really Robert and Stanley who saved me," Richard said.

Robert is Richard's 7-year-old younger brother, and Stanley Bolands, of whom he spoke, is a 10-year-old playmate.

"Robert got his arm in down to me and covered my face with his arm," Richard said. "He kept his hand like that all the time so I could get air. Meanwhile Stanley dug frantically at the soil."

Other playmates ran to Robert's home and O'Neil summoned the rescue squad. By the time aid arrived Stanley had dug so much of the dirt away that danger of suffocation was removed.

Robert was ashen. "Are you going cave-digging again?"

"I'll answer that for you," his mother interrupted. "He will not!"

St. Vincent Girls Hold Water Circus

The girls of St. Vincent's Home and School at Edgewood, D. C., put on a water circus yesterday that was complete with mermaids, acrobats, clowns and a chariot race.

In one event, featuring "the slowest swimmers in captivity," Florence Oxford and Patricia Murphy, both 11 years old, divided honors. They came in last.

Before the circus started, nine girls were awarded their junior life-saving badges. They were Gloria Woodhouse, Regina Bolac, Joan Beers, Dorothy Pitts, Mabel Cross, Rita Barry, Josephine Shannon, Doris Murphy and Dorothy Oxford.

off-Spain" policy, the Archbishop wrote in the Diocesan Gazette:

"In addition to all disquieting signs the world seems to be going mad has come this horrible civil war in Spain.

"Mediation? Who can undertake the task?

"It would be a great thing if leading European powers would attempt it, but this might lead only to dissension among themselves when the imperative need is that they should be kept together for peace of the whole world."

Loyalists Claim Victory.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 31.—Rebels thrust from the south Monday in an ittempt to open the main highway to Madrid and bring about a decisive battle.

They marched within 65 miles of Madrid, where they were locked in battle with loyalists in the Talavera de la Reina region. The government claimed victory in that encounter and asserted the rebels were retreating in confusion.

The Madrid war ministry said at 3:30 p. m. that "a fierce battle" had occurred in one of the sectors of the Guadarrama Mountains north of the capital. It was asserted the loyalist troops sent rebels reeling back, killing 135, capturing 35 men, 15 machine guns and some munitions.

The government also claimed its troops were making progress in the far south and were encircling Granada.

Atrocity charges continued. In Madrid the Febus News Agency said Communist refugees from Cordoba accused rebels there of executing more than 3,000 workers and Leftist republicans.

At Rome the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano reported Spanish loyalists had slain five Dominican fathers in Barcelona. Two of the fathers, the newspaper said, were professors in Rome's Angelicum Sollege. The Vatican said there was no news from 800 other Dominicans in Spain, although many were believed to be hiding in the homes of friends.

London announced the British Charge d'Affaires at Madrid had conferred with the government regarding the treatment of "certain political prisoners."

Madrid Reported Bombed.

Gibraltar (Tuesday), Sept. 1 (U.P.). Rebel radiocasts today said Madrid had been bombed from the air three times during the last 24 hours and that rebel bombing planes also attacked Valencia and the airdrome at Barajaz.

Rebel planes bombed the ministry of war building, communications centers and the north station in the capital, the radiocast said.

Benefactress Killer Held to Grand Jury

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Fifteen-year-old Roland Munroe, jr., was held to the grand jury on a charge of murder today in the hammer slaying of Mrs. Agnes Roffeis, 65, a cripple, which, authorities said, he confessed yesterday.

A coroner's jury, before which the choir boy refused to testify, ordered him so held after finding that the victim, widow of a former Boise, Idaho, plumbing contractor, had died from a fractured skull inflicted by the youth in consummation of an $8 robbery of old jewelry Saturday night.

"I'll stand on my constitutional rights and not testify," the young prisoner, whose calmness since his arrest has amazed veteran policemen, said on taking the stand.

"I acted in self-defense," he told prosecutor Richard Devine.

Guild Plaint Answered By Post-Intelligencer

Seattle, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Seattle Post-Intelligencer answered the American Newspaper Guild complaint today, challenging the constitutionality of the Wagner labor relations act and the jurisdiction of the Regional Labor Relations Board here.

The ereply, sent to Charles W. Hope, director of the regional board, bore the signatures of W. V. Tanner, resident publisher of the paper; H. Sylvester Garvin and Edward G. Woods, attorneys representing the newspaper.

A dissent to the charges made by the guild in its original complaint against the Post-Intelligencer was included. The guild had contended that Frank M. ("Slim") Lynch, photographer, and Everhardt Armstrong, dramatic critic, were discharged for guild activity. The Post-Intelligencer management said they were discharged for cause.

Mussolini Sees 60,000 Troops In Giant Parade

Review Ends Summer War Games; Pole Inspects French Defenses.

By the United Press.

Avellino, Italy, Aug. 31.—Italy's preparedness for military action, subject of Premier Benito Mussolini's Sunday speech to the nation, was demonstrated today in a gigantic parade concluding the annual summer war maneuvers.

For more than an hour Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel watched 60,000 troopers with full war pack march in review. Behind them came 400 big guns, 350 mortars, 2,800 trucks, 2,260 machine guns, 6,900 horses, 580 armored cars and 900 mortorcycles with machine guns mounted on their handlebars. Flying in formation above were 100 bombing, pursuit and reconnoitering planes.

Mussolini visited in Avellino and Salerno this afternoon. Later, he left for Rome by airplane, accompanied by Gen. Zombauthy, chief of staff of the Hungarian army, arriving there this evening.

Pole Views French Defense.

Paris, Aug. 31 (AP).—French Defense Minister Edouard Daladier today showed Poland's "strong man" what France's army would do if the country were attacked via the German frontier.

Daladier took his guest, Inspector General Eduard Ryde-Smigly, out for a first-hand view of secret French military maneuvers along the German frontier.

Demonstrating how much power France could loose against an invasion along that sector, Daladier and French generals staged military moves for the benefit of the Pole and his entourage.

Whether Rydz-Smigly had been favorably impressed by today's sights was not disclosed tonight, but it was said he would continue studying French military secrets until Thursday, when he will turn diplomat and talk with Premier Leon Blum and other officials of the French government.

Hearing that Premier Mussolini, of Italy, had asserted his country's potential fighting strength was already 8,000,000 men, Daladier assured the Polish visitor France was going ahead building up her own army.

"By the methodical growth which we will not cease to pursue," he said, "the army will remain the solid buckler of the fatherland."

Following luncheon, the two military leaders began a series of conferences believed to center around the binding of the two countries in economic and military pacts.

Goebbels Arrives Home.

Munich, Germany, Aug. 31 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels arrived home tonight, and was to confer with Chancellor Hitler on what Dino Alfieri had told him about Premier Mussolini's plans for Italy.

Alfieri is Il Duce's press minister.

As the plane in which Goebbels returned flew over the Italian frontier he wirelessed Mussolini his satisfaction over "such splendid unanimity of thought and aims between Alfieri and myself."

Rebels Force Foes To Drink Castor Oil

Gibraltar, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Rebels at La Linea this morning forced numerous Spaniards, including 13 women, to swallow half-pint does of castor oil as punishment for attempting to smuggle clothing to refugee friends in Gibraltar, it was reported today.

Rebel regulations at La Lina ban the export of clothing in order to prevent loyalist sympathizers from sending clothes to Gibraltar refugees, the majority of whom possess only the clothing in which they stand. Violators of the regulation are forced to down castor oil as punishment and the clothing is confiscated.

Bank Heads, Citizens Seize Robbers, Loot

Atlanta, Tex., Aug. 31 (AP).—Bank officials who had anticipated a robbery, and businessmen who responded to the alarm today captured two escaped Arkansas convicts as they emerged from the First National bank with $1,000 loot.

Tom Johnson, hardware merchant, felled Charles Chapman with a rifle bullet through the shoulder and citizens captured O. H. Lindsay after a brief chase in which they fired 15 or 20 shots.

Two citizens were wounded slightly by stray shots.
